Printed in London, Manchester, Frankfurt and Roubaix

Mark Lawson on the Reith lectures

A week in the life of the English language

Guardian 2 with European weath

Society

The parallel lines between protesters and the guards at Newbury

Review by Adrian Searle at the Tate

Cézanne in retrospect

G2 pages 8/9

Recriminations after tabloid helps to get fraudster Guppy out of jail

Darius Guppy: threatening action against Mirror

Joanna Coles

AVID Montgomery, chief executive of the Mirror Group, was last night embroiled in an embarrassing legal row after it became clear that one of his senior executives on the Daily Mirror had, in effect, prompted Darius Guppy's early release from prison early on Monday. It is thought that, having received confirmation that the Daily Mirror would pay a large sum for his story, Guppy felt able to assure the friend that he would be recompensed.

A mysterious friend paid crimir £160,000 to secure Guppy's a stor release from Ford open crime.

When Mr Montgomery discovered that a deal had been made he insisted the paper pull out. It is against the newspaper's own code of practice for a convicted criminal to profit by selling a story about his or her a story about his or her

Piers Morgan, editor of with an accomplice, Benethe Daily Mirror, said last night: "The Daily Mirror for five years in February has an absolute policy of 1993. Last July he was sennot paying money to con-victed criminals." As Guppy is bankrupt, it is thought that the paper would have paid the money to one of his creditors.

Guppy, who went to Eton and Oxford before jail, has served three years in prison for staging an elabo rate insurance swindle which netted him £1.8 mil-tenced to a further three years after he claimed he was unable to repay an out-standing £227,000 to Lloyds. Guppy is now planning legal action against the Mirror for breach of contract unless he can sell his story elsewhere for a com-parable sum.

Best man to Earl Spe

speech — Guppy counts many glamorous and influential people among his friends. He and his wife Patricia. a former model, were last night frantically trying to find another buyer for either of their stories.

Stuart Higgins, editor of the Sun, confirmed that two agents had approached him last week on Guppy's behalf. "I pretended to be interested because it was

The Muslim newspaper Q News broke the story about pose Guppy for trying to sell his story." Negotiations stopped because the Daily Mirror then exhe had always been teetotal. In fact, Guppy formed his own hard drinking club pressed a firm interest. Guppy was always a high profile prisoner. His apparat Oxford called the Ranent conversion to Islam while in jail made the headlines and surprised at least one of his friends, Boris

Johnson, assistant editor of the Daily Telegraph, who recalled in a fond article that Guppy had been con-firmed into the Church of ulph Flambards. His capacity to compete with fellow students at drinking competitions was legendary, as were his ex-otic lies. After carrying out his jewellery fraud, he was unable to resist boosting about it as the perfect

Voters back Harman in school row

Martin Linton and Patrick Wintow

ONSERVATIVE rebuilding the party's popular-ity on the back of Harriet Harman's decision to send her son to a grammar school appear to be dashed today by a Guardian poll, the first to appear since the controversy broke two weeks ago, showing that most voters think her choice was the right one. Respondents in ICM's poll said by a majority of 50 to 38 per cent that she was right. Among Labour voters the majority was 52-36.

People also said — by a bigger majority, of 56 to 34 per cent — that she would have been wrong to resign from Labour's front bench over the

The poll, eagerly awaited at Westminster by all political parties, will steady Labour nerves and will prove a huge disappointment to ministers, many of whom had claimed that the Harman controversy had finally breached the line of Tony Blair's defences.

The issue had lifted the morale of Tory backbenchers, who were convinced that the Central Office slogan "Labour says one thing and does an-other" had a popular

Despite their support for Ms Harman, voters believe by a much larger majority tha all state secondary schools should be comprehensives with a mixture of abilities, the poll shows. This is supPoll highlights

Most voters say Harriet

But they also support the only one point from 48% to 47%

posed by only 27. Even among Conservatives there is a 50-45

Voters also believe that in general Labour politicians should send their children to comprehensives, not to grammar or private schools. In Ms Harman's case, they appear to have accepted her argument that she was acting in the sit-uation as she found it.

This helps to explain why the affair has inflicted only a small dent in Labour's popularity, bringing it down from 48 per cent in December and January to 47 per cent in February.

The Conservatives are up five points from 26 to 31 per cent, but this is mainly at the expense of the Liberal Democrats and only brings them back to their rating before Emma Nicholson's defection. Labour's adjusted lead of 16 points is not significantly different from its 17-point lead months. On an unadjusted basis the lead is 25 points — again, little different from the 24 points in December. The most plausible explana-tion is that Ms Nicholson's defection caused a temporary dip in Tory fortunes in January but Ms Harman made almost no difference in ICM's respondents were asked: "Given that Labour is opposed to selective educa-tion, do you think Harriet Harman was right or wrong to let her son go to a grammar school that selects only high-ability children?" Within the majority who said she was right her strongest support was among Lib-Dems (58-32), with Conservatives on 46-45. Asked whether she should have resigned from Labour's front bench, all parties said ICM's question on compre-hensive education asked:

"What is the best way of running state secondary schools All schools are comprehen sive and take a mixture of abilities, or some schools take only high-ability children and others take only lower-ability children?"

Some recent polls have found growing support for selection, but people may respond differently when the questions refer to "grammar schools".

Although Tony Blair's office did little to disguise its omes and must be hisguise his huge pleasure at the poll, it also said the Harman affair might be taking time to seep through to the popular

A preview of the Tate gallery's Cézanne exhibition, the most important of the artist's work in 60 years, which opens to the public tomorrow. The Tate has already sold 34,000 tickets, and in total more than a third of a million visitors are expected Review, G2 page 8 PHOTOGRAPH: DAVID SALLITOR

TV sports vote blow for BSkyB

Rebecca Smithers and Andrew Culf

HE Government suffered a humiliating de-feat in the House of Lords last night as peers in-flicted a severe blow on voted to ensure premier sporting events remain freely available on television.

Conservative and Labour peers united to force through an amendment to the Broadcasting Bill which prevents subscription channels from having exclusive access to eight of Britain's sporting 'crown jewels".

The Government was forced to admit it would have to take the peers' views into account after earlier rejecting the proposals as flawed. They voted by 233 to 106 in favour of the amendment moved by Lord Howell, the former

The Department of National Heritage said that it would still push ahead with the consultation exercise announced last Friday, which the Lords interpreted as a delaying tactic designed to stifle debate.

The prospects of overturn-ing the amendment in the Commons appear remote. Tory backbenchers such as David Mellor, the architect of the 1990 Broadcasting Act, Olympic champion Sebastian Coe, and the former home sec-retary, Kenneth Baker, have said they would vote for the Labour heritage spokesman, Lord Donoughue, said: "This is a tremendous victory for the British sporting pub-lic. It helps to secure access for the 85 per cent of sports lovers whom Sky have shut

A BBC spokesman said the decision was "a welcome en-dorsement of the widely held public view that these great national occasions should be available for all to se It was a setback for BSkyB, which had earlier heard that the Office of Fair Trading had referred its deal with the BBC to cover the Premier League to the Restrictive Practices

The double blow clouder BSkyB's announcement it had doubled its profits to £103.6 million in 1995.

The amendment would mean continued coverage of eight "listed events" on main stream channels: the Grand National, the Derby, the FA Cup Final, the Scottish Cup Final, Wimbledon tennis, cricket tests in England, the Olympic Games, and foot-ball's World Cup finals.

Discussion of an amendment to "unbundle" sporting rights — guaranteeing access to highlights for terrestrial channels when satellite stations have exclusive rights was withdrawn by Lord Howell after the broadcasting minister, Lord Inglewood, promised to consider it.

TV deal referred to court, page 2; Letters, page 8

Child bride back in Britain

Solly Weale and Chris Nuttall in Ankara to Britain yesterday of Sarah Cook, the 13-year-old girl who married a waiter in Turkey, could not have been in greater contrast to her departure from

She left her adoptive country a national heroine in a blaze of interviews and publicity. But, four hours later at Heathrow, she looked more like a fugitive recaptured, a blue blanket thrown over her head, a police escort ready to whisk her away from waiting reporters. A month and several hun dred column inches after her illegal "marriage". Sarah arrived back aboard

Turkish Airways Flight 981. Her flight touched turn to page 2, column 3

"Between a third and a half of all cancers are caused by eating the wrong types of food"

Food for Thought

emenytolenian If you know which foods to eat - and which to avoid - you can dramatically reduce your chances of developing cancer of the breast, cancer of the prostate, cancer of the colon, cancer of the overy or cancer of the uterus.

Eating the right foods can also produce a great improvement in your health if you suffer from asthma, rheumatoid arthritis, heart trouble, indigestion, gall stones, varicose veins, wind, irritable bowel syndrome, high blood pressure, insomnia, allergies, tinnitus, ulcers, restless legs syndrome, premenstrual syndrome and many other problems.

A good deal of nonsense is written and broadcast about food. Finding the facts can be difficult.

Dr Vernon Coleman's book "Food for Thought" gives you the truth about foods and how to eat for good health. la contains information on vegetarian eating, microwaves, drinking water, mad cow disease, food irradiation, food additives, vitamins, fals and many other

There's even a section explaining how you can lose weight and stay slim permanently and easily.

... a guide to healthy eating which reads like a thriller"
(The Good Book Guide)

"The man is a national treasure" (What Doctors Don't Tell You)

"Dr Vernon Coleman is one of our most enlightened, trenchant and sensible dispensers of medical advice" (The Observer)

To order your copy send a cheque or postal order for £9.95 (payable to Healthbooks) to: Food for Thought Sales Office GU30, Publishing House, Trinity Place. Barnstaple, Devon EX32 9HJ. Post and packing is FREE. Your book will be despatched within 21 days. Money back guarantee - simply return within 28 days of receipt for a full refund if not delighted.

Published by the European Medical Journal

Britain's £3bn oil 'drain'

in four out of the last seven

Tax breaks lose the Government equivalent of 2p off basic rate

Richard Thomas

P TO 23 billion a year

— the equivalent of 2p

off the basic rate of income tax or an extra £5 a week on child benefit — is being lost by the Government because of generous tax concessions granted since 1983 to companies extracting oil from the North Sea, academics claim today.

As a result of changes to the petroleum taxation sytem over the last 12 years, the UK has "the weakest petroleum taxation regime in the according to researchers Ian Rutledge and Philip Wright at the University of Sheffield. The Government takes just 38 per cent of the cashflow of firms working the North Sea, compared with 54 per cent in Denmark and 57 per cent in Western Australia, their work shows.

These international differ ences in tax revenues explode the argument that falling state revenues are the result of lower oil prices.

compared with the £1.6 billion actually received. The total shortfall over the last eight made to the 1983 tax environment, the Treasury would have taken £4.7 billion in 1994 years is £12 billion. The researchers conclude: "The UK has so far had something of a raw deal out of the second North Sea oil boom."

In 1993, the state received 16p for each £1 of profit made in the North Sea, compared with 59p in 1986. This collapse in tax takings is the result of measures to cut the burden on oil companies introduced by successive Tory governments.

The key changes have been the abolition of oil royalties, the introduction of a 10 per cent tax subsidy for new ex-ploration, the scrapping of advance petroleum tax revenue for new firms, and a fall in the level of corporation tax from 52 per cent when the oil fields were first opened to 33 per cent today.
One result is over-production in the North Sea as firms scramble to take advantage

In the long run, this means the oil will run out earlier than it needs to, the researchers warn.

Arts 8/9 Society 10/11

Letters B Comment 9

Style 12/13

Inside

Obituaries 10

Simon Hoggart

sex yesterday. The first topic was homosexuality in the armed forces. This was raised by Michael Brown, the only current Tory MP to have "outed" himself.

Then Tony Banks intervened to ask if it was inconsis allowed to be homosexual if they served in the armed forces, yet it would be permis sible for an armed forces

This is what Mr Banks is for. He is the jester, licensed to say what others would not. Tony Blair would never dream of asking such a question; nor would David Clark, of whom you have never heard, but who is presently the shadow defence secretary. Mr Banks is the parrot in the Labour Party's cage, shouting out im-precations while his owner serves tea and cakes to the

Mr Portillo listened silently, but shook his head slowly from side to side. Nich olas Soames (nobody has ever suggested that he might be a homosexual. Quite the reverse. A girlfriend he knew before his marriage is alleged to have said that making love to him was like having a ward robe fall on top of you with the key sticking out) said that he was not aware of any inconsistency in government policy, and there the matter

Of course such an exchange could not have occurred on television. There one of the multitudinous Dimblebies would have been on hand to reprove Mr Banks. (Have you noticed how peevish Jonathan gets if anyone criticises the Prince of Wales on Any Questions?)

But then television still treats politics with gravity and respect, something which An hour or so later we

First night

Michael Billington

THOL FUGARD has apartheid. But how, as a dramatist, would be react to its dismantling?

long explored the inhu-man absurdities of

The answer, in Valley Song

at the Royal Court, is with a stark, almost Biblical parable which on the personal level is quietly touching but which,

on the political level, strikes me as strangely hesitant. The simple story is told by the author, played by Fugard himself. It concerns an old coloured tenant farmer, again played by Fugard, who lives in a valley in the Karoo with his 17-year-old granddaugh-ter, Veronica. Buks, the old man, dreads losing his patch of lovingly-tended land to an incoming Afrikaner as much as he does his granddaughter to the temptations of Johanbecoming a singer. The author, who is also the pro-nesburg, where she dreams of spective landowner, looks calmly on at this primal battle

What gives life to the story of Buks and Veronica is Fugard's compassion for both. He writes fondiv of the old man who has lost wife and daughter, clings tenaciously to Veronica, and is terrified of change. But equally Fugard recognises Veronica's need for escape and fulfilment. The clash between age and youth is well handled where Buks scatters to the winds the rands Veronica has earned from singing for the

David Brindle, Social

ALABOUR government would introduce professional regulation of social workers and other social services staff and set strict

Labour plans new curbs on social workers

Labour would also establish | standards".

not least in the cruel scene

bill moved by Peter Luff (C. Worcester). This would oblige state on the cover which age group they are intended for. t's supposed to be a warning for parents rather than an enicement to the girls. At the moment, Mr Luff said the covers are occupied by other material: "Men Unzipped — an intimate guide": "I Had Sex With My Ex": Three steps to Sexual Heaven Bedroom Bliss Starts Here" 'I Slept With 100 Boys"; and 'Loads of lechy lads looking for a bit of skirt action. middle-aged MPs leaned for ward like customers at a Sobo strip club, eyes bulging, lick-ing their dry lips. But everyone took it very solemnly. Mr Luff concluded in the obligatory fashion: "Young people must learn that sex is not for instant gratification but is a God-given gift which, in a loving relationship, is one of the best reasons for being

Why does nobody ever add at this point: "And it's also fun if you've never met the other person before"?

Sandwiched between the sex we had the Prime Minister. For the first time in a for night, it struck me that Mr Blair won the exchanges at

Mr Major's soundbites didn't quite work; endlessly listing the trade unions who have shares in privatised industries is, frankly, not enough at this stage.

And you know he's getting rattled when he produces a new Majorism . one of those unique verbal constructions we haven't heard for a few reeks. Yesterday's was "Do you agree that the Government should not sit in a board room, in a metaphysical

"Metaphysical" means, as we all know, "having the form of an empirical hypothesis bu testing and therefore meaningless," which sounds a fair description of most of the Prime Minister's replies. I suppose he really meant "metaphorical".

He was so shaky that Labour MPs shouted "More, more!" at him, and then they cheered Mr Blair offstage in a Tories treated their leader in switched to teenage sex with a the past two weeks.

white man, claiming it is "devil's money".

It is only when you explore the story's political implicaarise. Through the character of the author, Fugard acknowledges Veronica's dreams but points up their difficulty of fulfilment. And, at the end, admit ting the future belongs to her,

he wanty wishes that the valle could "stay the unspoilt, innocent little world it was when I tions that doubts begin to

The frustration of dashed dreams

Boondoggle . . . Pat Buchanan answers questions on a radio phone-in programme yesterday

Buchanan gets his claws on Louisiana voters in attempt to pinch an early lead in Republican presidential race

Martin Walker in Baton Rouge, Louis

DAT BUCHANAN could hardly contain his delight. Another red menace was invading the United States, and as the first Republican delegates of the presidential election year were being chosen yester-day he was the anim politiday he was the only politi-cian there to stop it.

"These cheap Chinese crawfish are a scandal," he declared at Sylvester Crawfish Processors in White-ville, Louisians. "It's more of this foreign trade boondoggle, more of this globa-loney that is taking American jobs, destroying American industries, while the foreigners sit back and augn at us.

This kind of politics, with presidential candidates and effectively acting as a cartel.

"Any other business acting differently."

But the Premier League

said it was "odd" the referral had come several years after the deal had been signed, add-ing that by the time the matter came to court, the deal might well have expired.

"The timing seems extraor-dinary, particularly when Parliament is discussing future legislation. It is also odd that the OFT has decided to use the Premier League as a whipping boy, since nearly all sports are governed by the same principles of collective negotiation of TV rights." Sam Chisholm, BSkyB's chief executive and managing director, said it was the first time anywhere that a regulator had referred a sporting body to the courts. "If the agreement is ruled illegal, it will enshrine the rich clubs and impoverish the poor."

The OFT insisted the matter had been under investiga

ter had been under myestiga-tion for over a year. A spokes-man said it had talks with the Premier League, BSkyB and the BBC last May. "We needed to take a look at how the deal worked in practice before taking action."

Meanwhile, several leading clubs were yesterday ponder-ing the consequences if the Premier League's rules were Michael Dunford, chief executive of Everton, said:

Why are the OFT getting involved now? They never got involved when ITV and BBC picked off all the major sports events between them."

verturned in court.

Letters, page 8; City notebook, page 11

their media entourages descending on a small cray-fish plant or a drug treat-ment centre, or a school or an endangered local park, had been the monopoly of lowa and New Hampshire. For the past 40 years, Iowa bad the first presidential caucus race, and a week later New Hampshire had the first primary.

Against all the odds. Louisiana's attempt to prempt them both is starting to pay off, even though the Republican front-runners, Senator Bob Dole and the multi-millionaire Steve Forbes, stayed away in def-erence to the jealousy of lowa and New Hampshire. The Louisiana caucus has won national attention be-cause, despite manipulation to fix the vote for the Texan conservative, Sena-tor Phil Gramm, all the momentum appears to be with the conservative underdog. Pat Buchanan. Louisiana's caucus is designed to "give the south an early voice in the presidential election year", the state's attorney said after Iowa and New Hampshire took legal action to defend their privileges.

Louisiana had another motive. The state's Republican Party, dominated by Mr Gramm's friends, wanted to give him a safe and guaranteed victory early in the process.

They limited the vote to registered Republicans, scheduled it from 4 to 8pm on a Tuesday (Louisiana indays), and nominated 42 ballot locations across the state that had never been used before. Just to make extra sure, known sympathisers of Mr Buchanan were mailed incorrect information on where to vote. "We are going to need every pastor and every retired policemen who supports us to get to those cauour votes are counted hon-estly," Mr Buchanan said.

More than most other politicians, he has the volunteers to man the voting money, spending about from Iowa. $3 million to Mr Forbes's

"right-to-life" movement, and even through some trade unionists who back his protectionist stand, be is not short of manpower. And the money is starting to come in. Roger Milliken. of the second-biggest US textile group, and Tom Monaghan, chairman of the Domino's Pizza chain, have joined his campaign. Mr Gramm, who claimed last week that he was gates", toned down his opti-mism yesterday."A majority is still a victory" he said stations. He has little as he flew into Louisiana

The Guardian Wednesday February 7 1996

Road to the White house

$14 million, but through the Churches and the 6; Pass Notes, G2 page 3

Club TV football deal referred to court

BADING football to competition law and I see clubs and broadcast-ers united in fury yes-sport should be treated terday after the Office of Fair Trading referred the exclusive TV. deal between the Premier League, the BBC and BSkyB to the Restrictive

The referral — which coincides with growing political unrest at BSkyB's rights to certain televised sporting events — could prevent other sporting bodies, including the Football League, and the Test and County Cricket Board from selling TV rights. Premier League sources aggested the move was politically motivated, while BSkyB called it "bewildering". The OFT argues that the Premier League's rules — which allow it to negotiate the collective television rights to Premiership soccer restrict competition because clubs are prevented from individually selling cov-will have to prove the deals are not against the public interest. The hearing is likely to take place in a year's time.

John Bridgeman, the Direc-tor General of Fair Trading, said the Premier League had a "major, if not a unique post-tion". He added: "By selling rights collectively and exclu-sively to the highest bidder first discovered it". You can admire Fugard's In the 1992 deal, the Premier League gave exclusive TV rights to its matches to BSkyB honesty. But it is disturbing to hear the once-impassioned, angry dramatist of Sizwe Bansi is Dead and The Island and the BBC for five years to the end of the 1996/7 season, and agreed to give them the rights for the next five years, assuming they matched bids from rival broadcasters. The lapsing into a dreamy nostalgia. Of course change, as South Africa is discovering, painful, slow and problemfraught. But one wishes that OFT claims this also restricts Fugard, whose earlier plays exposed the evil of apartheid competition.

In court, the Premier with more enthusiasm. What does come across in Fugard's 90-minute fable is the Biblical fertility of the land and the shakiness of white entitlement to it. In playing both the author and the patri-archal Buks, he also differentiates between the two charac ters, and savours each crisp phrase as if it were a nut. And Esmeralda Bihl movingly endows Veronica with the right bright-eyed optimism. This is theatre at its simplest: a mythic tale, three characters, a set consisting of a few russet curtains and apple-boxes. But now that South Africa has finally discarded a discredited system. eems pointless to evoke some seems pointiess to evoke some idyllic rural past. Idyllic, one wonders, for whom? This review appeared in later editions yesterday.

could embrace the new order

an independent inspectorate for all community care services, including residential homes and home helps. Mr

Milburn said. He called for a new partnership between cen tral government and local au-thority social services depart-

Football: Who shows what

- BSky3 and the BBC are currently in a joint £304 million five-year deal for Premier League matches, which runs out at the end of
- BBC shows Match of The Day highlights on Saturday

C BSkyB shows live matches on Sunday and Monday.

- O ITV has live coverage of final from 1998.
- © BBC screened finale live from 1938 until 1997.
- Under new 1997 deal ITV will show a live FA Cup match on Sunday afternoon from rounds 3-6 and one semmi-final live.

© BBC retains 'Road to Warnbly' FA Cup highlights as it chips in £15 million to peckage,

- Endsleigh League BSky8 has £125 million five year deal for 60 live games.
- ITV, through joint deal with BSkyB screens highlights and also screens one live two-legged play-off.

European Champions

- @ BBC and ITV share live matches
- C ITV will screen highlights.
- BBC has live coverage of England V Scotland match in June. Channel Four has five coverage of Italian games for estimated
- BSkyB and ITV joint £130 million four year deal from 1997 with FA for five coverage for England home International matches in qualifying matches for World Cup and European matches.

Coca-Cola Cup

- O BSkyB screens final five
- @ BSkyB eareens live metahes under a
- BSkyB screens one two-legged semi-final

European Champions O ITV has live coverage.

BSkyB profits rocket up to £106m

Pauline Springett

ROFITS of Rupert Mur-doch's BSkyB group nearly doubled in the six months to the end of December to £106.3 million, the satellite broadcasting company said yesterday.

The results, overshadowed by the eruption of the Premier League TV row, were fu-elled by a large jump in the number of subscribers prior

Sam Chisholm, BSkyB's chief executive and managing director, said the last three months of 1995 had been the company's best ever, with net subscribers increasing by a record 358,000.

He added that the first half of the company's financial year was typically the peak period for new subscribers, than 20 per cent of UK homes | Hudsucker Proxy, and Robo-but he believed there was po-tential for increased revenues | further eight due to be as the cricket World Cup. tential for increased revenues and profits in the second half of the year.

Mr Chisholm said the company's appetite for acquiring broadcasting events was not diminished by the Office of Fair Trade's action over the Premier League. He did not think the affair would adversely affect the company's trading.

BSkyB now has 5.2 million subscribers in the UK and Ireland — 3.17 million pay for the "Direct to Home" satellite service with the remainder signed up to cable.
The company's finance director, Richard Brooke, said there was no sign of a slowdown in demand for either BSkyB operates in more further eight due to be launched this year under a joint venture with Granada. Sales of satellite dishes rose by 6 per cent over the last year, and were particularly high during the week before Christmas when they reached a record 40,000.

The company managed to dovetail this with a reduction in the number of cancellations to around 10 per cent, compared with 30 per cent in 1992. Mr Brooke claimed this was due to a sharp improvement in the service being offered to subscribers.

We believe the growth in

Focusing on the future, Mr Chisholm said BSkyB could start digital satellite broad-casting in the 1997/98 finan-cial year. The company was thinking about moving into pay-per-view television although he declined to confirm whether next month's Bruno vs Tyson world boxing title fight would be broadcast in this way. However he confirmed that the group's news operation.

Sky News, was part of a consortium seeking the right to supply news to the ITV television network. The consortium is challenging the monopoly status which subscribers is driven very turn is challenging the momuch by programming," Mr Brooke said, adding that next month's attractions included has enjoyed since ITV was films such as The Mask, The launched 40 years ago.

Child bride Sarah ends long journey home from Turkey

continued from page 1 down 14 minutes early, and the schoolgirl who put the Essex town of Braintree on the international map was led down steps at the rear of the aircraft to a waiting

Following her, her 39year-old mother Jackie, who flew to Turkey to try to persuade her daughter to return, looked weary.

It was understood last night that Sarah was to be reunited with her father Adrian, aged 42, at an undisclosed destination. The family are expected to be given time to try to get back to as normal a life as possible before being interviewed by Essex social services.

national standards for their ments "not based on major work, Alan Milburn, a new additional legislative shadow health minister, said burdens, but built on agreed and enforced national Islamic, sat in business surrender her passport.

class and seemed happy and relaxed, chatting to It was the final leg of a long journey from the Turkish town of Kahra-manmaras. Earlier, she and her mother had been besieged by cameramen as she took a connecting flight from Ankara.

Sarah, who has denied reports that she is six weeks pregnant, married 18-year-old Musa Komeagac in an illegal Islamic ceremony early in January with the full consent of her parents. He is in jail facing charges of statutory rape. Sarah has told the Turkish press that she will return to her "husband" as soon as possible. She had hoped to be able Passengers on board the flight said that Sarah, her head covered according to but is expected to have to

An Inaugural Offer

7 nights in Costa Rica, the Land of Wonders, from £525.00

A glorious climate, beautiful landscapes Lakes, rivers, two coastlines, exotic flora, wild-life, friendly people, national parks, sophisti-cated lifestyle, peaceful, beaches beyond be-lief and a true paradise on earth. Costa Rica is travel today. The above will be made available to the British traveller when we inaugurate the first ever flight series to San Jose, the lovely capital of Costa Rica. Since the country is small and liverse, most places of interest can be visited in the course of one day, these include the Pacific or Caribbean coasts, the Turtle channels, the national parks, volcanoes, coffee plantations, orchid farms, botanical gardens, akes or San Jose with its lovely squares, theatres and museums.

With these attributes we have decided on the 4-star Hotel Torre (or similar) as our base both to relax and explore. It has fine accommoda-tion with full facilities, bars, restaurant, gar-den and swimming pool. Excursions are avail-able to all of the sights mentioned above. We are making available just 20 places at a and unspoilt by large tour operators.

special inaugural offer on a first-come first-reserved basis from just £525 for a seven-night stay. Remember that Costa Rica, although being the third most prosperDEPARTURE DATES & PRICES 1996 per person in a twin Feb 15, 22, 29, £525 Mar 7, 14, 21, 28, 535 Apr 4, 565 - Apr 11, 18, 25, 545 May 2, 9, 16, 23, 30, 5545

Single room supplement£125 Supplement for the 4-star Hotel Fiesta, Puntarenas. £56 per person per week Tariff includes: return fights, road transfers, ? nights at the Hotel Torre on a bed and breakfast basis, services of a loca

0171-6161000 VN

VOYAGESJULESVERNE 21 Dorset Square, London NW1 6QG Travel Promotions Ltd. ABTAV1661 ATOLSESS Our offices are open for telephone reservations weekday Barn to 7pm and at weekends 9am to 5pm. For personal culters, our office hours are 9am to 5pm

Protester : How do you

surgeo

نے۔۔۔۔

3.74

300 - 5

e turkul Program Programa

11 Table 2

Bottom

framec

A farmer rescues his sheep from a snowdrift near Eskdalemuir, Dumfries and Galloway, where 19 travellers had to be airlifted from a train in 14ft of snow photograph who mached Birmingham: A plastic bag gives shelter photograph was shared as the shared beginning to the s

30,000 homes without power as snow brings chaos to most of Britain

Alex Bellos and Tom Sharratt

ALMOST 30,000 homes were without electricity yesterday after heavy snowfalls caused disruption throughout the country. bringing chaos to air, road and rail networks.

Southern Scotland and Cumbria bore the brunt of blizzards that also hit Wales, the Midlands and the North-East. In Dumfries and Galloway, 19 people were airlifted from a train stranded in 14ft of snow. Roads were also badly hit: 1,200 stranded travellers had to seek shelter in schools closed for the day.

and Chris Barrie

Dozens of power lines collapsed in south-west Scotland and south-west Wales. Scottish Power said al-most all its 12,000 homes without electricty should be reconnected this morning, but South Wales Electricity (Swalec) said its engineers were having trouble getting to damaged cables serving 15,000 customers.

A Swalec spokesman said they had been unable to use helicopters because the conditions were so bad, and many homes would be without power overnight as temperatures fell to -3°C. With the cold snap pre dicted to last until the weekend. motoring organisations advised drivers to avoid using cars. Hundreds of accidents were reported yesterday and many main roads were closed in the North West and Scotland. Birmingham International Airport was closed and rain services disrupted At least two people died because of the weather. A driver died in a three-car pile up in North Wales and a man aged 72 was found fro- high as before and there was ish Gas chairman Richard ing figures when Sir Denis Giordano, himself paid Rooke, who was chairman of £450,000 for a part-time role, has been manoeuvring to oust Mr Brown for some months. fairly hounded by the media.

Gas 'fat cat' gets more cream in £4m pension package tive about my own future and But yesterday he praised British Gas.

zen to death after ho left a no danger of enforced nursing home to go jogging. Despite the snow — every changing the rules affecting Split falls to quell row, and power cuts. A London Weather Cenwhere saw at least two tre spokesman said snowinches apart from Cornfalls would be getting wall, East Anglia and Kent lighter from today, with sleet spreading from the of around -2 C was higher west. The temperature will than the previous cold be milder but there will be snaps. The National Grid said demand was not as no thaw until the weekend.

Forecast, G2, page 16

for gas for which it has insuf-ficient customers following the rapid onset of competition ordered by the Government.

Bottomley 'framed' surgeon

Vivek Chaudhary

o cour

HE THEN Health Secretary, Virgina Bot-tomley, and other leading figures in the NHS conspired against a hospital consultant following a patient's death to deflect media attention from health cuts, the High Court was told yesterday.

"I was framed and set up." Anthony Percy, a consultant orthopaedic surgeon at St Mary's hospital, Sidcup, Kent told the court. Mr Percy is suing the Daily Mirror for libel after an article pub-lished last March branded him "Doctor Dolittle". It suggested he was guilty of gross dereliction of duty because he bore some responsi-bility for the death of Mal-color Murray, aged 45.

Mr Murray died at Leeds General Infirmary last March after being flown 200 miles from Queen Mary's hospital because a neurosurgical bed could not be found for him in the South East region.

Mr Percy, aged 55, of Bickley. Kent, told the court that the hospital's chief executive. Stephen Collinson, had sent him a letter after the article appeared, saying it was politically inevitable that scape-goats would be required.

He added that Mr Collinson had told him that someone at the Department of Health had said "Sack the doctor".

Mr Percy named those conspiring against him as William Wells, chairman of the South Thames Regional Health Authority (STRHA): Mr Collinson: Mrs Bottomley and a senior civil servant at the Department of Health named Hollebon.

He told the court: "I feel like a criminal. I feel like my reputation and my whole life is in question. It was orchestrated in my view."

His counsel, Charles Gray
QC, told Mr Justice French and the jury that Mrs Bottomley had called for Mr Percy's role in the affair to be

The Daily Mirror claims that its story was a fair and accurate account of the con-

Anthony Percy: alleges plot to conceal bealth cuts tents of the STRHA report which criticised Mr Percy for giving advice from home by telephone rather than going to the hospital when Mr Mur-ray was brought in.

Mr Percy said he was on call but was not asked to attend the hospital that night. He would have been there "like a shot" if asked. He gave what administrative support

Mr Percy said inquiries held by the hospital and the STRHA had "manipulated the Mrs Bottomley was involved in that manipulation?" "It seems like it to me," Mr Percy replied.

senior house officer — who had only worked in the NHS for five weeks — to cope. Mr Percy said he had he could by suggesting neuro-surgery units to which Mr Murray could be moved.

Mr Carman said senior con-sultants, including the medical director in the NHS executive, believed Mr Percy, a consul-tant for 19 years, should not have left his South African every right to assume and expect" that the patient would be found a bed in Southampton, a unit he recommended, but knew there would be "flak" when he learned that Mr Murray

George Carman QC, for Mirror Group Newspapers, asked: "And are you saying to be a wardrobe."

HE abrupt departure of Cedric Brown, the Britsynonomous with "fat cat " salaries, caused a new politiemerged that he was to lion to fund. Equitable Life receive a pension and other said that an annuity for that perks which could cost as much as £4.26 million to amount would cost £4.258 mil-lion to buy. In the Commons there were

His early retirement from the group in April was an-nounced as British Gas unveiled radical plans to split the group in two, with new chief executives appointed Mr Brown, aged 60, will receive a pension of £247,000 a year but will also be paid £120,000 to act as a consultant to the privatised group for a year after his departure. In addition, the company will provide him with an office, a ecretary and a chauffeurdriven car to support him in his new but unpaid role as head of the Institution of Gas

Engineers.
The scale of the retirement package reignited the row about boardroom excess which began 15 months ago when it emerged that Mr Brown had been awarded a 75 per cent pay rise to £475,000 a year.

Brown had been forced out or made a fall-guy. A consequence of the demerger was that his job would disappear and he believed it was time to make way for younger managers.

Brown found support from one of the gas industry's leading figures when Sir Denis billion of long-term contracts Glordano, himself paid Rooke, who was chairman of for gas for which it has insuf-Brown had been awarded a 75 per cent pay rise to £475,000 a Pension experts last night backed Labour's claims that a 247,000 index-linked pension him. "It has not been pleasant would cost more than $4 million to fund. Equitable Life has happened and I prefer to said that an annuity for that look forward. I am very position to fund. Equitable Life has happened and I prefer to said that an annuity for that look forward. I am very position to fund. Equitable Life has happened and I prefer to said that an annuity for that look forward. I am very position to fund.

clashes at Prime Minister's Questions when Tony Blair asked: "When customer com-plaints to BG have doubled and the company is being forced to split in two today because of huge losses on gas contracts, do you think that the leaving package of the chief executive . . . is justified or not?" John Major said that the de-cision to split the company was designed to increase comperition — something Labour should welcome — but he was non-commital on the pay

That, in the private sector, is a matter for the shareholders," he said. Mr Brown earlier denied he

Duke died from huge overdose

Gary Younge

HE Duke of Northumbon viveur among British high society, died from a massive overdose of amphet-amines prescribed to combat a rare illness, an inquest was told yesterday.

A rare gland disorder caused the duke, aged 42, the Queen's godson, to gain excessive weight and suffer from chronic insomnia that was so bad he used to fall asleep during the day. He took 20 Dexe-drine stimulant tablets a day to counteract the effects of the sleeping pills he took at night. In October last year the duke's valet found him slumped on the third floor of his private apartment at his stately home — Syon House in Brentford, west London. Pathologist Richard Shepherd told Hammersmith coroner's court he died of amphetamine poisoning — the level of am-

"I'm not partisan to their side. It's over-idealistic. One protester shouted: 'The trees love us.' And I thought: 'How do you know? They might be thinking, 'I'd love phetamine in his body was 50 per cent higher than a dose which could be fatal, and three times the normal level. It was suggested the 17-stone duke might have taken more than his normal dosage because he knew he had an estate meeting which would require his full attention. "There is absolutely no question of drug addiction." said his GP, Dr David O'Connell. He told the inquest the duke had been taking amphet-amines since 1973, when he was diagnosed as suffering from clinical depression. In 1990, his excess weight and sleeping problems were found to be caused by a rare gland disorder. He was taking the amphetamines to "comba a genuine pathological condition", added Dr O'Connell. The coroner, Dr John Bur ton, recorded a verdict of acci dental death. The 11th Duke of Northumberland had an estimated fortune of £255 million.

From just £30 for a full 12 months' cover, no one offers you more security on the road than the RAC: RAC Rescue covers you, not your car. So now you can call on us whenever you need fast roadside assistance, even when you're simply a possenger in someone else's car.

Roadside Rescue. In more than 8 out of 10 cases, our patrols can fix cars on the spot. Otherwise, they'll tow you to a nearby garage, free of charge.

Accident Service. A replacement car, free legal advice, plus we'll deal with your insurers.

Theft and Vandalism Cover. If your car's stolen or can't be driven because of vandalism, we'll remove it to a nearby garage or secure area. Battery Assist. A new battery on the spot.

Whatever service you use, collouts and our labour are free - you only pay for parts.

You can also tailor your cover to meet your needs, with the option to take out Joint and Family Cover or add our 'Al Home' service.

Don't wait until you break down. Find out how to join the RAC today.

PHONE FREE TODAY ON OR INTERNET http://www.rac.co.uk/

TARREST AND 1995 TAC NOW AT LES

AND QUOTE $$1840/3/XX

YES - I want to join the RAC. Please tell me how I can join from just £30° Mr/Mrs/Miss/Ms

Send to: RAC Rescue, FREEPOST, Bristol BS38 7AU, (No stemp needed.) Rescue costs 530 if you pay by Continuous Credit Card Authority or "Rescue costs 530 if you pay by Communus Cimon Com Aumonily or Xinac Debit. Full price is 636 and 65 discount applies to first year numbership only. All prices include an empliment fee. Phone lines spen

ST0004/SS1839/3/XX

An ex-security guard at Newbury speaks out modern projector was developed

Sex swap duo's plea to court

Ciare Dyer Legal Correspondent

"gender reassignment" sure dated biological view of dif-gery launched a high court ferences between the sexes battle yesterday for the right and a fallure to recognise that female. female brain...

The two, named only as P. Though registered as male and G to protect their identi- at birth, each had "an essenties, are challenging the "distinating and embarrassing" refusal of the Registrar General of Births, General of mistakenly relying will affect thousands of trans- solete following new scien-sexuals. There are estimated trific evidence. to be 8,000 or 9,000 in Britain. She cited a discovery ing. Without the right to nai. Nature, last November change their birth certificates, transsexuals cannot mus in the brain, which is adopt children with a partner. men. was also "strikingly" fe-In Britain the case of the male-sized in six male-to-feformer merchant seaman. male transsexuals.

April Ashley, in 1970 laid down that an individual's sex lished at birth. A similar case brought by two other transsexuals was ruled admissible last month by the European Commission i reserve judgment today.

Strasbourg.
Laura Con QC, representwor transsexuals who the court the Registrar General's "unlawful and irrational" refusal was based on an "outto be legally recognised as P and G were born with "a

Deaths and Marriages to on outdated and inappropri-allow them to alter their birth ate criteria established in certificates. the Ashley case. She said The outcome of the case these had to be considered oband 30 similar cases are pend-; reported in the scientific jour marry in their chosen sex or smaller in women than in

> This supported the hypothesis that gender identity "stems from an interaction between the developing brain and sex hormones." said the report.

The court is expected to fundholding

with surplus of £50,000

David Brindle, Social Services Correspondent

ONE of the first practices of fundholding family doctors is quitting the scheme with a £50,000 surplus which it made in previous years, and leaving its health authority to meet £60.000 of its estimated losses this year.

The anomaly benefiting the practice in Plympton, Devon, arises because the Govern ment's fundholding rules have no provision for a surplus made in one year to be set against a loss in another.

surplus of just under £100,000 to pay off some of its anticipated 1995-96 losses of £112,000. A spokesman for the health authority. South and West Devon, said yesterday: "Sixty thousand pounds may not seem a lot in the context of our budget of almost £258 mil-with the total overspend we met last year of £17,000 from

The Plympton practice, Savage and partners, was one

GPs get budgets for their patients' hospital care. From April more than half the population of England will have a

Chris Westwood, the lead partner, says he and his col-leagues are withdrawing at the end of next month be-longer worthwhile.

"Fundholding is really an-legal responsibility for the provision of care for our patients" he wrote in Fundholdable when there is insufficlent money in the budget. So responsibility back to the

Dr Westwood was unavail-

This becomes unaccepting magazine.

health authority

fundholding doctor.

more than one practice."

Highland peak | GPs to quit funicular hits environmental objection

Erlend Clouston

THE attempt to run a railway close to the top of Britain's fifth highest mountain hit an awkward set of buffers yesterday in the shape of Scottish Natural Heritage, the body charged with protecting the Scottish environment.

It announced opposition to the Cairngorm Chairlift Company's proposal to replace ageing equipment with 1.2 miles of funicular track on the 4.084-foot Cairn Gorm.

After a lengthy board meeting in Edinburgh, it said it was still unhappy about the The practice is voluntarily company's ability to control using about half its accrued the 250,000 sunmer visitors expected to patronise the £16.5 million scheme The verdict will mean yet another delay to a project in-tended to secure the long-term future of the ski and recreational facility. It is a serious blow for the company. which has spent the past 15 lion, but it must be compared months attempting to soothe environmentalists' fears that visitor pressure could wreck the habitat.

The company's chief executive, Tim Whittome, said last of the pioneering fundholders night: "It is not the end of the in 1991. Under the scheme, night: "It is not the end of the road. They are just saying that more work has to be

However, the continued objections make it more likely that the project, due to be considered by planners on March 4. will now be decided by a public inquiry. Even if it survives that, the inevitable de | cause fundholding is no lay could threaten the companv's access to £2 million of European Union funding. other form of privatisation. The company had agreed to and we are assuming more restrict tourists to conducted tours of the summit, just 484 feet above the funicular's terminus. If controlled rambles still posed too much of a threat to the rare plovers and Arctic mosses. Mr Whittome reserved the right to close the we have decided to pass this terminus.

However, Scottish Natural Heritage described the agree ment as inadequate. able for further comment.

Addressing the balance of movie history

Helen Nowicka on cinema's blue plaques

Film directors Derek Jarman (left) and Alfred Hitchcock, and Trevor Howard and Cella Johnson in Brief Encounter

ROM the outside the drab office block at 44 Hatton Garden seems as dully functional as its neighbours in London's diamond market, but after decades of obscurity the importance of this ddress in cinema history is about to be recognised. It was on this spot in 1896 halls showing his own 50-second movies, and was a key figure in launching the British film industry.

this year to mark the cente-nary of British cinema, the Hatton Garden site and 280 others of similar impor-tance are to be decorated with commemorative plaques.
The first will be unveiled at the theatre of the Univer-sity of Westminster, Regent Paul perfected the technology for his theatrograph, forerunner of the modern projector. Paul took the machine around must street, on February 20, expension of the modern performance in Britain took place there bered, as will the Bristol of-fices of Aardman Animations, creators of Plasticine stars Wallace and Gromit.

Less high profile endeavours will also be recognised, like that of Gordon Richardson of Workington.

As part of celebrations this year to mark the centerary of British cinema, the Earton Garden site and 280 Easton shot Moby Dick.

Eating and Elstree many nominations. "We have been the loss of British commemorative of the support o they are disappearing and people want to record their affection. We have had world war three going on film industry talent to America in 1908 by Close the world's first beauty America. Groves worked contest and went on to before Warner Brothers durione a stlent movie star in ling the studio's drive to in Hollywood. Her photogra-troduce sound, and of Stockton-on-Tees won pher husband was killed in a car crash and she returned to England virtually destitute. However, over which is the oldest functioning cinema in Brit-ain. There were contenders took place there.

Other plaques will mark out such significant locations as Carnforth station in Lancashire where Trevor Howard removed grit the British Film Institute of the British Fi in Brighton, Birmingham

70 years after he left his home in St Helens for 新。 我们还不知题##

It's a matter of taste.

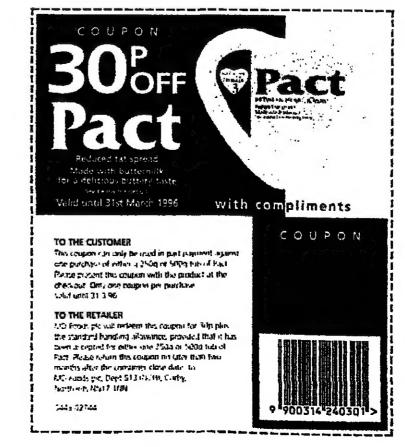

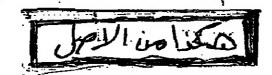

Most of us care about what we eat, but don't want to compromise on taste. Introducing Pact and Gaio. Pact is a reduced fat spread made with buttermilk to give it a distinctly buttery taste. It is also enriched with Omega 3, the same essential nutrient that is found in fresh fish. Gaio is low in fat and comes in a range of delicious flavours. Gaio contains Causido Culture which means that it not only tastes good - but can help maintain your body's natural balance by lowering cholesterol when eaten as part of a low fat diet. So why not cut out the coupons below and taste them for yourselves.

FOR FURTHER PRODUCT INFORMATION, PLEASE CALL THE FOLLOWING NUMBERS:

News in brief

Footballer gets 5 years for killing

FOOTBALLER James Kelly was jailed for five years yesterday for killing a man by kicking him in the head. The 22-year-old Wolverhampton Wanderers midfielder attacked Peter Dunphy, 26, in an early morning brawl outside a Liverpool hotel in Kelly, of Willenhall, West Midlands, pleaded guilty to manslaughter at Liverpool crown court. His 23-year-old brother John and a third man, Kevin Atkinson, who admitted assaulting Mr Dunphy, were jailed for nine months. Mr Dunphy died almost instantly after the kick, the court was told.

Water inquiry challenge

A CRITIC of Yorkshire Water's handling of the drought in the central Permines yesterday called for a full partiamentary inquiry covering the effects of privatising the industry on the water supply.

The call came from Penny Ward of Water Watch, one of the The call came from Penny Ward of WaterWatch, one of the firm's most persistent consumer monitors, as a two-month inquiry into Yorkshire Water's handling of the drought was launched to a lukewarm reception from consumer groups. The company's decision to pay for the inquiry and appoint its chairman, John Uff QC, led to caution about the prospects of a full, unfettered review. Ms Ward said: "We need an inquiry which covers the whole country."

Professor lift head of engineering law at King's College, Lon-

Professor Uff, head of engineering law at King's College, London, defended the inquiry's independence. — Martin

Boy killed holiday doctor

A HOSPITAL consultant was shot dead on front of his wife by a 13-year-old boy as they strolled hand in hand on a retirement holiday in Turkey, an inquest at Portsmouth heard yesterday. The boy had helped Michael Kettle, 51, and his wife pick flowers before shooting him in the back with a shotgum.

Mr Kettle and his wife Frances, 57, from Southsea, Hampshire, had been on holiday in Ula Magia in June 1994. Coroner's officer David Thomas said the boy had been jailed for 24 years, reduced to five years after he confessed. A verdict of unlawful killing was recorded.

Golden oldie beats Bond

RICHARD Wilson, the star of BBC TV's One Foot in the Grave,

yesterday received the Oldie of the Year award. He best the former James Bond, Sean Connery, to the title organised by editor of The Oldie magazine, Richard Ingrams. Previous winners include Judge Stephen Tumin, Sir Denis Thatcher and Spike Milligan. Jack Jones, 82, chairman of the National Pensioners' Convention, was named Oldie campaigner

'No collision' before sinking

THERE was no evidence to indicate that the trawler Pescado collided with another vessel before she sank with the loss of her six crew members, salvage expert Robert Micklaszewick, who supervised the raising of the boat, told Bristol crown court yesterday. The trawler's operators, Alan Ayres and Joseph O'Connor.

deny manslaughter. The jury has been told that Ayres will claim the 100-tonne trawler was hit by a submarine before she sank in

Mr Micklaszewick said the damage on the Pescado was caused by the vessel hitting the sea bed when she sank. The prosecution has alleged that the vessel was unseaworthy and unstable. The

'Baby smuggler' charged

A BRITISH aid worker accused of smuggling a baby out of Romania will appear in court on March 1 after being charged yesterday with conspiracy in an illegal border crossing. It is the third time in 14 months that Britons have been accused by the authorities of smuggling babies out of the country.

Police allege that Willian Boast, 49, took a baby from a hospital where it had been abandoned by its parents and smuggled it to Britain, where social services last year began an investigation into how the baby had come into the care of a couple in North-east England. The couple reportedly said they were given the baby by a man at the Watford Gap service station on the M1.

Airline pays for crash stress

A WOMAN is to receive compensation for stress after a plane hit her house before crashing, killing its five crew members. Karen England was left severely traumatised by the accident. for which Air Algerie has admitted responsibility. The Boeing 787 clipped the roof of her house before crashing at Willenhall Wood, Coventry, on December 21, 1994, and has offered her compensation believed to be a four-figure sum.

An air accident report blamed pilot error.

'Boycott Canadian fish'

SUPERMARKETS should stop buying fish from Canada in protest against seal culls, MPs said yesterday. People in both countries felt revulsion at fishermen's cruelty in shooting and chubbing the animals, said Labour's Tony Banks supporting a campaign by the International Fund For Animal Welfare (IFAW). Labour's Diane Abbott and Elliot Morley, Conservatives Peter Bottomley and Andrew Bowden, and Liberal Democrat Simon Hughes also signed the early day motion. — James Meikle.

How to become a proofreader

by Trever Horwood Do you envy people who love their jobs? I did too, so a few years ago I looked for a way to combine my love of books with the need to earn a living. I was a successful sales manager. so I needed something that discovered that every, year thousands of new titles are proofread and copy-edited by freelances working from home throughout the country. I also discovered that neither a qualification in publishing nor a publishing background was necessary to become a freelance. Today I earn over £20,000 a year as a freelance proofreader and copy-editor, and I love every minute of it. My only problem now is deciding which assign-ments to accept since I am regularly offered more work than I can cope with.

Sounds simple, doesn't it? Well, it wasn't! I had to do a lot of research on the way, identifying potential sources of work... learning the language of pub-lishing jargon... discovering through trial and error the best way to proceed... and, hardest of all, how to break into the world of freelancing.

Now you can learn from my experience (and my mistakes) in a new publication: 'Freelance Prosperating and Copy-editing.

This manual provides a clear months for a full remail for satisfied.

publishing industry and the freelance's role in it, together with a series of fault-finding exercises with precise answers and explanations that provide all you need to complete straightforward proofreading

A list of 101 potential clients and their addresses is also included, and my step-by-step approach them with confidence and maximize your chances

With this manual as your guide, you too can enjoy a granifying and rewarding freelance career in publishing. Proofreading is particularly rewarding, as is copy-editing. What's more, you will save time and money by avoiding the mistakes made by most beginners - myself included, at the time.

To order your copy of 'Free-lance Proofreading and Copy-editing' send your name, add-ress, book title and your pay-ment (cheque or Visa/Access with exp. date) of £15 inclusive of nostage and handling to of postage and handling to Carnell ple, Dept CE27 Airesford, nr. Colchester, Essex CO7 8AP or telephone their 24 hour order line on 01206 825600 (quoting ref. CE27). allowing up to 14 days for delivery. You may return the manual any time within three

Sir Paul also announced that 60 per cent of those arrested so far for street robberies in the controversial Operation Eagle Eye had been black. He said the next big EMBERS of the police initiative, in April, would be aimed at cocaine permanently at-

Duncan Campbell Crime Correspondent

tive" police stations in an attempt to reassure communities about police behaviour, the Commissioner of the Metropolitan police, Sir

Paul Condon, said yesterday. He also advocated the use of video cameras in police cells to demonstrate that his officers had nothing to hide. He said the Met dealt with about 500 civil actions a year and heroin dealers In his "state of the nation" session with journalists after Monday night's Commons dehate on the Met. Sir Paul announced that crime was genuinely falling in the capital with a drop of 30 per cent in armed robbery and 30 per cent in motor vehicle crime in the past two years.

Burglaries had dropped about successful alleging impropriety, of which about 140 were dealt with promptly with average payments of £7,500 [a total of about £1 million]. Of 50 that went to court last year. 28 were won by the Met. Many of the others were mischievous.

He said people who had visit unannounced but no vision drama series. Our been sceptical about Operation Eagle Eye because he had permanently. stated that many of those in-volved were black youths.

Condon calls for members of public to 'patrol' suspect police stations

now accepted that it had been a success. "Anyone who says that people commit crime because they're black is a bigot or a fool," said Sir Paul. There was now an underclass of alienated young people, excluded from school, involved in drugs and with little respect for their fellow citizens. The police did not have the "luxury" of dealing with the causes of this alienation but had to handle its results.

did not have the confidence of some communities. To try to win this, he said, he had suggested that lay visitors could be attached 24 hours a day to police stations about which there was concern. At present lay visitors are entitled to

Video cameras could also be placed within stations, including cells. This would protect a police officer from false accusations, it would encourage correct procedure "so the few 'bad apples' we've got would fear exposure", and it would cut down on bureducracy because it would in-crease the number of guilty pleas. Already the use of video cameras in drug opera-tions was leading to more convictions.

He also reaffirmed that he was in favour of a fully-operating police authority — at present London has a committee with fewer powers than in provincial areas. He said he expected such an authority to grow out of the existing had once been, and pointed out that at that time it enreputation. Now that the force was more open and honest than ever it was under greater scrutiny.

Sir Paul cited the BBC2 tele- from the country".

In any organisation of 45,000 people there would be racism and corruption, he said, but he believed that was probably more within journalism than the police service, which was making attempts to deal with it.

Ethnic minority officers now totalled 800 tout of 28,000), and 9 per cent of new recruits. The quality of all recruits had never been higher, he said. The average age of recruits was 27. They were streetwise and no longer "19-year-olds

Colleges seek mergers in struggle for survival

ORE than 50 universities and colleges have merged or are holding pressures threaten to drive some institutions to the wall. hybrid "colliversities", with students ranging from 16year-olds in courses such as plumbing to postgraduates.

In the largest scheme, the University of Derby is negotiating with six further education colleges to create a 50,000-student regional university offering a ladder from further education to degree COURSES

The trend is causing alarm at the Further Education Funding Council, which fears an "academic drift", with institutions neglecting basic vo-cational training in favour of higher education courses. worried about losing control

ing Council for England to study the problem.

Roger Waterhouse, vicechancellor of Derby universi-ty, said a study by management consultants KPMG showed that a merger would be "financially sensible", and an academic feasibility study had been carried out. The colleges and the university insist that the motive for seeking closer links is educational. But financial survival is becoming a more pressing concern, and prospects for next year are even worse than for this. Further education colleges will be directed to take in more students, while the sec-

Higher Education predicts thousands of job losses in the coming year. Derby university's policy of tor's budget is frozen. The National Association of Teachers in Further and set up a working group with | education. It must now look the Higher Education Fund- | to local part-time students Institutions with fewer than 3,000 full-time students are vulnerable, and small art and agricultural colleges are looking for shelter. The Epsom and West Surrey colleges of art have merged. Portsmouth college of art has joined Portsmouth university, Winchester school of art is talking to Southampton university. Lincolnshire agricultural college has signed up with De Montfort university and Warwickshire agricultural college is talking to Mid-Warwickshire college. A report by KPMG in December 1994 predicted that 100 colleges would merge or close once they left local au-thority control, but the Further Education Funding Council has discouraged merger unless strict condi-

The vocational emphasis of colleges must be preserved, and they must show they rapid expansion has been and they must show they halted by the Government's have explored alternatives to

Strength in numbers

Lancaster university and Charlotte Mason school of education, Ambleside, Cumbria; Portsmouth university and Portsmouth college of art; Pontypridd and Rhondda colleges, Mid Glamorgan; De Montfort university and Lin-colnshire college of art, Lin-colnshire college of agricul-ture and Bedford college; Epsom school of art and West Surrey college of art; Long-lands college and Marton sixth form college, Middlesbrough; Kirby college and Acklam sixth form college, Middlesbrough; Middlesbrough; Kirby college and Acklam sixth form college, Middlesbrough.

Mergers agreed between: Monkwearmouth and Wearside colleges, Sunder-

Refugees win first round in council housing fight

Alan Travis

A JUDGE last night granted a High Court injunction against Southwark council after it refused to provide temporary housing for a refugee couple from the Ivory Coast because they could no longer claim housing benefit longer claim housing benefit.
The legal action taken by the Refugee Council and backed by Shelter is expected to be the first of many such High Court cases following the Government's decision to withdraw welfare benefits from up to 30,000 asylum seek-

The change which affects those who fail to claim asylum on arrival or who have lodged an appeal came into effect on Monday.

The Ivory Coast couple ar rived in Britain at the end of last week and lodged an asylum claim on Monday. The man, referred to in court as Mr K, bears the physical effects of torture and has spent three months in prison. Both his father and uncle have been murdered

Kate Allen, deputy director of the Refugee Council, said: "The couple should have had priority housing because they were vulnerable, did not speak English and had been tortured." The High Court yesterday agreed that the Refugee Coun-cil had an arguable case. The injunction instructing Southwark to house the married couple was granted pending a full hearing next Monday.

of parts of its empire. It has freeze on numbers in higher | merger. land; Hinkley college, Leices-tershire, and North Warwick-shire college, Nuneaton; Humberside and Lincolnshire universities; Mid Warwickshire college, Leamington lege of agriculture; Brunel and South Bristol colleges,

> Merger talks between:
> Derby university and six > FE colleges: Broomfield agricultural college, Morley; High > Peak, Buxton; South East Derbyshire; Mackworth; Burton upon Trent; and Derby merced with William Turner sixth form): Salford university and University college, Salford: Crewe and Alsager colleges: University of Wales and Coleg Normal, Bangor, Tile Hill and Henley colleges, Coventry. Staffordshire university and Newcastle-under-Lyme England and East Birming-ham college; Reading college and Berkshire college of art: Southampton university and Winchester school of art:

Leeds Metropolitan university and Airedale and Wharf-Wilmorton.
Teesside university and Cleveland college (already college)

Available now in hardback

Hamingo

tions about a decline in the standard of speech and also defended the role of Andrew Culf ronunciation. In the first of five lectelevision.

HE Rupert Murdoch professor of language and communication last night rejected the notion that spoken English was in need of hospital treatment.

Jean Aitchison, deliver-ing the opening 1996 Reith Lecture, spoke up for informality and change in lan-guage and defended swearing as increasingly acceptable.

Posing the question "Is our language sick?", Ms Attchison sought to dismiss frequently raised objectures being broadcast on BBC Radio 4, entitled The Language Web, she said: "A wide web of worries, a cobpeople as they think about language — any language — and this must be swept

John Jenkins and Patrick Bogue of Onslow's auctioneers sort 300 railway posters from the 1930s for sale in London on March 21 in aid of children's charities. Found under a former railwayman's bed, they are expected to fetch more than £100,000.

English rules are 'not OK'

Being "matey" in conversation was often regarded as more important than being proper, resulting in increasing approval of informal styles of speech, including swearing. Appro-priately, for an Oxford newspapers, radio and "Newspapers can popularise new words, such as bonk, yomp and wimp, and radio and television can influence attitudes towards language. These days, they send the sensible but direct message that it's all right to talk in different ways: Lenny Henry, Janet Street-Porter . . . and others, show that variety is the spice of linguistic life. Their different accents, like their different clothes, are a mark of individuality."

From 'ere to split infinity, Q2

Modern asthma therapies could save lives

Chris Mihill Medical Correspondent

ORE than 100,000 lives could be saved world-wide each year, including 1,000 in the UK, if all asthma patients received modern therapies, international specialists said yesterday. A programme by the World Health Organisation, backed by asthma societies, across the world, aims to promote effective treatment of the disease and focus research on why it is rapidly increasing and what can be done about

Doctors said while the programme would increase prescribing costs for anti-asthma drugs, it would reduce the said: "More than 150 million divided for hospital emergency people in the world suffer said."

tients' health. Romain Pauwels, chairman of the Global Initiative for Asthma (Gina), told a press conference in London: "Be-tween 60 and 70 per cent of deaths from asthma may be prevented with modern treatment and we are confident that 100,000 lives a year could be saved by our programme." The programme encourages use of "controller" drugs - inhaled corticosteroids rather than relying on the tra-ditional Ventolin-type "reliever" drugs, which should be kept for sudden attacks of breathlessness. Prof Pauwels, head of respiratory disease at University hospital. Ghent, Belgium, bers are increasing in every part of the world." Although the cause of the increase was unknown, research would focus on environmental or indoor pollutants, particularly house dust mites, to see if it was possible to prevent people from developing asthma.

Tim Clark, of the National

Heart and Lung Institute in London, said adult sufferers lost on average around six work days a year and chil-dren missed 30 days of schooling, with many parents tak-ing time off work to look after them or pay for home help.
"The costs of effective treatment will be more than recouped by the benefits to individuals and society," he

As the leadership race gets under way, Martin Walker in Metairie, Louisiana, witnesses the conversion of blacks to Republicanism

Praying for a God-fearing president

Behind the lines ELECTION USA

Patricia Anderson. aged 40 and black, are shaking generously as she waves the golden Jesus banner and prances down the nave of her church crying "Sweet, sweet Lord". These days the mlx of Lord". These days the mix of "The other thing I like white fiddler and organist about Buchanan is the end to and black flaurist is not un-usual, nor is the thoroughly in the Deep South in chanan for president. Mr Buchanan calls himself 'the angry white male" and promises that the first thing he would do as president discrimination against white people with all these racial quotas and set-asides and affirmative action programmes" Mrs Anderson, a nursing aide, grandly shrugs that aside. Mr Buchanan is her candidate because he is com pletely against abortion, and that is God's cause. She has spent weeks at a time on her knees, praying and singing outside abortion clinics.

welfare. Just cut it off, the worst thing that ever hap-pened to black folks. Welfare takes the man out of your button advertising Pat Bu heart, that's what I say. The structive place to witness the chanan for president.

Lord wants us to be respondilemma of black politics in Lord wants us to be responsible for our own selves pening in black America. It began in the Reagan years. would be to "put an end to the which produced a sudden flood of black intellectual conservatives who condemned welfare and food stamps and affirmative action as liberal devices to keep black folk in their place.

Now, through the antiabortion movement and the Christian Coalition, black conservatism is spreading far beyond the intelligentsia.
Blacks are no longer a reliable vote for the Democrats.

In 1994, Ohio's Republican governor won 40 per cent of the black vote, and 24 of the 62 black candidates in the last congressional elections were running on the Republican

America. Cleo Fields, a pencil-slim black congre and disciple of Jesse Jackson. decided to run for governor last year. At 28 per cent of the electorate, the black vote was

'Republicans are loading two bullets:

win in Louisiana, or anywhere in the South, as long as they were white and put together a coalition of blacks and white moderates. But

If blacks helped the Repub licans redraw the constituency boundaries, they could have their own guaranteed enough to give him the lead congressional seals, two or over the other Democrats but three in each Southern state.

Hillary Clinton and affirmative action' not enough to prevent his pre-dictable defeat by the white Republican.

Of course, all those black vot-ers incorporated in redrawn black constituencies meant Democrats could always that dozens of once marginal seats became safely white Republican strongholds. A century of Democratic control of the South was destroyed in less than a decade.

James Carville, the politi-cal strategist who managed ing this year's Republican strategy. "They are loading just two bullets: Hillary Clinton and affirmative action." There is little the Clinton camp can do about either. The ness to compromise on almost every other policy issue, he has nailed his colours to the belief that America's racial divide is as wide as ever and this is no time to stop trying and it might just work. The black turnout in elections has been routinely 10 percentage the Hispanic turnout is even lower. That may change be-cause of the Motor Voter Bill. one of President Clinton's first acts. It allows people to

Atwater, a brilliant Southern | Bill Clinton's 1992 election | and renew their driving list wondering just what a generative Republican strategist | campaign, is already predict | cences, and there are now eration of Democratic loyalty | for President Bush, devised | ing this year's Republican | 9 million more registered vot | has brought it. ers than there were in 1992,

If Jesse Jackson can energise them, and the Democrats can build a grassroots machine to get them to the polls, they may represent the winning margin.

But that is the Democratic dilemma: the more dependent poor and the minorities, the harder it is to compete for middle class votes, which win elections black households now have incomes above $35,000 a year, and 29 per cent have above $50,000. This expanding black middle class is still tenuously by the churches, however. And Martin Luther King's old Analysts see a growing strain as the Democratic Party forces black churchgoers into a coalition with gays and feminists and radical secularists".

Few white men are bette than Bill Clinton at attending black churches. He knows the hymns and adopts a special poss, like a polite and willing guest. He knows that he going to sing and clap and have a good time, and he is used to meeting loyal Democratic vot-ers there. But increasingly he finds women like Patricia An-derson, with their Right-To-

Life and Buchanan buttons. "I used to be a Democrat, when I didn't vote much," she explains. "Now I do vote, I'm a Republican."

Blcycle thieves... Chinese police parade a group of men caught stealing bicycles before a crowd outside a department store in Belling. They were sentenced in public to terms of up tion is sliding toward bankruptcy and will have to cut its permanent staff of more than 10,000 people at its headquarters in New

Nigeria accuses Ogonis | Gulf rulers seek to rein in of acting for foreigners | Qatar's maverick emir

Chris McGreal n Port Harcourt, Nigeria

HE Nigerian military regime is trying to snub out attempts by the exement for the Survival of the maintain international pres-sure on General Sani Abacha. The military governor of part of an international Ogoniland. Colonel Dauda spiracy to wreck Nigeria. Musa Komo, has claimed that foreign governments are pay-ing Ogent "mercenaries" tens of thousands of dollars to vilify and destabilise Nigeria. and has ordered an inquiry. Col Komo, who supervised Saro-Wiwa's execution in November, expressed regret that Mosop's deputy president, Le-dum Mitee, had escaped the gallows. Mr Mitee was the says that in honour of Saro-Wiwa there are no plans to name a new president. men expected to go on trial. But he denies accepting cash. Mosop has been driven name a new president.

Mr Mitee has been banned from returning to his home in Ogoniland except under military guard. Last month he was detained, in an effort to prevent an Ogoni rally. Last week Col Komo accused him of accepting $20,000 (£13,000) from foreign governments as part of an international con-bassy to embassy, living the same life for which he es-caped judgment," Col Komo-said. "He is trading on lies. That is the raw material with The following day Mr Mitee was questioned by the head of security forces in Ogoniland, dum Mifee, had escaped the gallows. Mr Mitee was the only Ogoni leader acquitted in last year's trial. He has taken control of Mosop, but aware of the fate of 19 other

BOOK A VALENTINE £69 SPECIAL ON EUROSTAR TO PARIS

A democratising sheikh is under pressure for bucking

the regional trend, writes Kathy Evans

HE new emir of the tiny Gulf state of Qatar, Sheikh Hamed bin Khalifa al Thani, is under pressure from other ruling families in the Gulf to "see the error of his ways" and fall into line with "traditional" foreign and domestic policies. The principal pawn in the hands of the Gulf states is the emir's father. Sheikh Khalifa al Thani, whom he overthrew last summer. Since then Sheikh Khalifa has toured Arab states gathered in the capital Bori and village squares, and blocked roads to show their continuing support for seeking support for his efforts to return as emir. He has now been offered a home in Abu Dhabi, less than 200 miles from the Qa-nancing the huge invest-

It is not only the content

some areas the security forces tari border. were reported to have been According According to high-level sources in Qatar, the de-posed emir still controls an restrained, but in others they howed their brutality. estimated $3 billion (£1.98 billion) of the emir-Maj Umahi was anxious that the world should not know what was happening. ate's financial reserves. which he refuses to hand back. Qatar is having diffibanned from the area and a back. Qatar is having diffi-financial Times journalist culty paying its bills and fi-was arrested. Mr Mitee was released after the rally was broken up. Maj lts extensive gas reserves. Umahi drove him home. Two It is not only the content days later he was picked up again and warned not to return to Ogontland without his Gulf allies. Unlike other Gulf kings permission or military escort. The remaining Mosop leadand emirs. Sheikh Hamed ership is cautious in its criti-cism of the military regime, but Mr Mitee says that Mosop regularly talks to the press, explaining his policies and ideas. The other keep aloof underground by the harass-ment and arrest of its members, although the movement is not legally banned. Mr Mi-tee, a lawyer, does not have Saro-Wiwa's charismatic the executions of his friends

But the military authori-ties, who thought they had established control of Ogoni-land, were disturbed to find that "Ogoni Day" on January 4 was openly supported by protests against pollution by the Shell oil company and speeches in memory of Saro-

To discourage the rally, Maj Umahi placed Mr Mitee under house arrest and later had him arrested. But people

Riot police dispersed them with tear gas and shotguns. In and his own close escape.

not broken. from their people and "It has not been possible to rarely feel the need to exis not broken "It has not been possible to rarely feel the need to ex-operate openly because of the plain policies. Sheikh to overthrow him — that government's attitude toward Hamed has also ended cen-the organisation. But one of sorship of the media and, to the things that we got out of the alarm of other emirs, has sought better relations | the young emir by favour-with Iran and Iraq, both of | ing his father. Sheikh Kha-which are viewed with sus- | lifa is ensconced in Abu picion by other Gulf states.

Despite public warnings from the Saudis, he has also sought closer relations with Israel. Other Gulf states want the question of commercial ties with Israel put on hold until a compre-hensive peace treaty is agreed by all Arab states. But Sheikh Hamed wants to sign an important gas deal with Israel.

The last straw for his al-lies came at the Gulf sum-mit two months ago when Sheikh Hamed walked out in protest at the appoint-ment of a Saudi national to head the regional Gulf Co-operation Council. Sheikh Hamed's protest was the first effective challenge by

This guy in Qatar is pushing it. We want him to see the error of his ways'

Brother role played by Saudi Arabia in the region. "sins" were compounded by his decision to let the Bahraini opposition movement appear on Qatar state television. The interview ment required to develop coincided with an upsurge but the style of Sheikh in unrest in Bahrain and distinction Hamed's rule that has upset the detention of hundreds of religious leaders and activists campaigning for the renewal of parliamentary democracy.

"This guy in Qatar is pushing it," a prominent Saudi information official would be too much of a precedent — but we just want him to behave, and see the Dhabi's lavish Interconti-nental Hotel But according to local reports, two new palaces in the Abu Dhabi marked for the former ruler, who is still treated as a head of state.

Qatari officials play down suggestions that the loss of financial reserves is affecting the economy.
"There is cash in the name of the previous emir, but this can't affect our progress and projects. Our country is a rich country."

the foreign minister Sheikh Hamed bin Jassim the Qatari capital Doha said contractors were months behind in receiving payment, and civil servants were being paid out of the local telephone company's receipts. In October the emirate had to take a loan lion) from international banks to pay its bills. "The liquidity problems have been around for some time, but they are compounded by the need to put up about $1 billion for the gas development project," a Western diplomat in Doha said. "Any outside money would come in extremely of $300 million (£198 mil-

Under the old Gulf tradition, however, there is no e and that of the emir. All oil income. goes to the emir before being distributed to government ministries.

• A first round of talks began at the United Nations in New York yesterday on a scheme to permit Iraq to sell $2 billion (£1.32 billion) months to buy food and medicines for its sanctions-January 4 is the message that Mosop still has the support of the people," he said.

talks of allowing the electror of his ways."

The Gulf states now aptalks are expected to last pear to be getting back at about a week.

News in brief

American exports of plutonium revealed

THE United States has shipped nearly a tonne of plutonium to 39 countries in the past 50 years, including Argentina, India, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Japan, New Zealand, Pakistan, South Africa, Sweden, Turkey, Uruguay and Venezuela. And it has acquired nearly six tonnes of plutonium from Canada, Taiwan, Britain

Although these transfers were all legal, details have not hitherto been made public. Figures showing the volume of trade in plutonium — used in reactors and nuclear weapons — were disclosed yesterday when the federal department of energy unveiled records of all the plutonium that has ever passed through US hands.

The information was released following promises by President Clinton and the energy secretary, Hazel O'Leary, of greater openness now that the cold war is over. It includes the amounts and locations in nine states of 200 connes of plutonium and highly enriched uranium that Mr

Clinton said last year were not needed for national security.

The accounts put the total plutonium inventory — including all nuclear weapons and stockpiles — at 99.5 townes, about what private experis estimated. — New York Times, New York.

Peres goes to top of class

SHIMON PERES'S commanding lead in the Israeli opinion polls was underlined yesterday when the Labour prime minister won by a landslide in a mock vote at a Tel Aviv high school which has accurately predicted elections for 20 years.

In the Blich ballot - likened to the New Hampshire primaries and broadcast live on Israeli radio — Mr Peres won 61 per cent and the Likud opposition leader, Benjamin Netanyahu, 39 per

But Mr Netanyaho is pinning his hopes on an audacious electoral pact has engineered with rightwing rivals in the run-up to the general election now expected in May. His Likud faction is to run a joint list of candidates with the hardline nationalists of the Tsomet perty. — Derek Brown, Jerusalen.

UN to cut staff by 10 per cent

THE top financial official of the United Nations says the organisa

York and in seven other cities by 10 per cent in the next two years. Joseph Connor, the undersecretary-general for administration and management, told a General Assembly working group that by the end of this year the organisation was expected to be about $420 million in debt for normal budget expenses alone, not counting peacekeeping operations.

The personnel cuts, made necessary by a combination of reduced budgets and the failure of member countries to pay dues on time, would bring about the first reduction in the UN bureaucracy.

— New York Times, New York.

Seventh divorce for Elizabeth Taylor

RLIZABETH TAYLOR has filed for divorce from her seventh husband, construction worker Larry Fortensky, 20 years her junior and pictured above in happier times. She cited irreconcilable differences.

Her lawyer, Neil Papiano, said the divorce would be amicable. "She and Larry have great affection for each other. It's just not working out and they felt it would be best to file at this time," he said. "They're still good friends and year free forch other." and very fond of each other."

The couple met in 1983 at a clinic where they were being treated for substance abuse. They married in 1991, but separated last August. — AP, Los Angeles.

China appoints blunt general

CHINA has promoted a trenchant hardliner to deputy chief of staff and sent him to a coastal region facing Taiwan to help command the new Taiwan Warfare Headquarters, according to a report in Hong Kong yesterday. Lieutenant-General Xiong Guangkai, a veteran of military intelligence work, left Beijing for Fujian after a special meeting of between the Communist Party's central military commission, a policy-making body now eclipsing the polithuro.

The appointment, according to a report in the Chinese-language Sing Tao Daily, is linked to preparations by the People's Liberation Army for large-scale military exercises and possible military action in the run-up to Taiwan's presidential election

It appears to be part of a crescendo of intimidation against Taiwan before its first presidential poll on March 23.

Gen Xiong is well known for his blunt and outspoken views on Chinese reunification. During a visit to the United States last year he told the defence secretary, William Perry, that Taiwan was in danger of becoming "explosive" and poured scorn on its demo-cratic reforms.

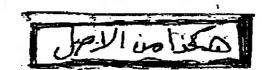

Put in overall charge of the Taiwan Warfare Headquarters is Zhang Wannian, deputy chairman of the central military commission, the newspaper said. — Andrew Higgirs, Hong Kong.

Auf Wiede

workers Si

Madrid T grussels

Monster ha again after

Madrid recalls its Brussels envoy

PAIN recalled its ambassador to Brussels yesterday, signalling further anger at Bel-gium's refusal to extradite two alleged members of the Basque separatist group ETA. Tension between the two European partners was exacerbated by the shooting at lunchtime of a Socialist politician and lawyer in San Sebas-tian, the Basque capital.

Two ETA gunmen raced up Fernando Múgica Herzog as he was leaving the city court with his son, shooting him in the head. "Don't look Múgica, aged 61, was promi-nent in the Basque branch of the Socialist Party. His brother Enrique was justice minister in Madrid from 1988 to 1991. He was taken to hospital alive but died soon after.

The two men, members of Spain's tiny Jewish community, were instrumental in establishing diplomatic relations between Spain and Israel in 1986. More than 20 politicans have been assasingted by ETA time it been the state of t ated by ETA since it began its campaign of violence.

1 exports of

nrevealed

(top of class

by 10 per cent

for Elizable th Taylor

THE WAY

1-1-2

14-11-5

, where the con-

to blunt genera

This latest attack comes in the run up to the general elec-tion on March 3. ETA habit-attacks during election cam-paigns. Its support has rallied as a result of the judicial inas a result of the judicial investigations into the "dirty war" against its members in the mid-1980s, which have led to charges being brought against the former interior minister José Barrionuevo.

Earlier yesterday the for-eign ministry called in Bel-gium's envoy to express "pro-found dissatisfaction" with his country's decision to free the suspected ETA members Luis Moreno Ramajo and Raquel Garcia Arranza Spain's attitude reflects a mistrust among European countries of one another's ju-dicial systems, especially in the area of politically sensi-

The 1993 Maastricht Treaty envisaged stronger ties in legal and police matters but members have proved reluctant to relinquish judicial independence.

independence.

Spain's protest to Belgium falls short of severing diplomatic relations but it still signals indignation on the part of Madrid, which is suspi-cious of Belgium's erratic re-cord on extradition.

The couple, accused in Spain of providing back-up and support to an ETA unit based in the Basque province of Viceys and of co-mercing fled to Belgium in 1992 and were arrested there a year later. Two weeks ago, after protracted Spanish efforts, Belgium granted their extra-dition. But the justice ministry's decision was overruled the day before yesterday by Belgium's top court. The couple's defence law-yers claimed successfully that the charges were political rather than criminal. The Belgian justice ministry added yesterday that Spain had for-mulated its extradition request incorrectly.

The council of state will make a final decision on the extradition in six months time, but the distinction it has drawn between member-ship of a terrorist organisation and actually taking part in an attack has infuriated legal system, which is just as good as theirs," said the oppo-sition leader, José Maria Aznar, who is expected to win the general election. "This situation should never arise between members of the Union."

Spaniards.
"This casts a slur on our

The court's decision is also an embarrassment to the Bel-gian government, which had supported Spain's request. A Belgian statement said: "The of Vizcaya and of co-operating state must respect the deci-in at least one attack, in stons of the courts."

Friendly fire . . . US soldiers in Bosnia hurl snowballs into a tent yesterday. Meanwhile, Bosnian Serb leaders said they bad suspended talks with Muslim-Croat authorities and would no longer attend meetings on federation territory until Serb captives were released. The government captured

Auf Wiedersehen Pet workers say farewell

John Palmer in Brussels

HE days of British labourers working, Auf Wiedersehen Pet style, as casual workers in Germany and other European Union countries may be

The EU's new Italian presidency believes it has enough support — despite British opposition — for a law ensuring that workers seeking jobs in other EU countries receive the same pay and conditions as local employees. The European Commission originally proposed the controversial directive govern people seeking work abroad more than four years ago. It has been blocked until now by Britain and a minority of other countries. But after an informal meeting of employment ministers last weekend, some of Britain's former allies are now ready to change sides and approve the

The German government in particular has come under heavy pressure to outlaw carecruit workers from Britain, Portugal, Greece and other ow wage countries. A German diplomat said competition but not in the exploitation of foreign workers in Germany, particularly by foreign-based employment

Unions go on the offensive

NTERNATIONAL union leaders said yesterday they were launching an offensive to ensure that freer employers and employees world trade benefited all

Bill Jordan of the Interand colleagues from the United States, France and Japan had been putting the message to company chiefs and bankers at the Days ers, who are recruited by "International trade countries to work in Germany, France and the better offensive... We are going to argue for standards in the new world trade social security cover. order," he said. — Reuter.

instance, who have ended up without any proper provision being made for payment of their tax or social security."

Under EU voting procedures, Britain needs the support of two other larger countries, as well as some smaller ones, to maintain a veto on the directive. But Spain, which held the EU cated that they will join Germany, France and other countries which have been

A Commission official said yesterday that there was a good chance that the directive would be passed under the Italian presidency in the next six months.

know where they stand. It workers and not just big will not prevent the free business. will make it harder for cownational Confederation of boy employers to undercut Free Trade Unions said he local competition because of agencies in their

The Italian draft directive will exclude certain job cate-gories and professions and is not intended to cover people admitted that a qualified majority in support of the direc-tive was more likely now. But the Government still

Spain, which held the EU opposes the directive, which presidency until the end of last year, and Italy have indiffer Britons to take low-paid jobs in Germany. It reserves the right to challenge the legal base of the proposed law research for action on the in the European Court, even problem of exploited foreign if Britain is outvoted in the cases of British workers, for workers.

Eye surgeon sets sights on Yeltsin challenge

Money and fame may not be enough for the latest candidate to | in 12 Russian cities. He con- has fallen into bad company. He said on NTV television: join the presidential race, writes David Hearst in Moscow

MILLIONAIRE eye surgeon, the former Soviet Union's favourite entrepreneur, declared this week the central state controls of the central state controls of the old regime.

The party won 2.7 million
The party won 2.7 millio preneur, declared this week that he would stand for presi-dent. But many doubt Svya-toslav Fyodorov's ability to become the "third force" in Russian politics.

Bolstered by his relative success in December's parlia-there are already 29 other nentary elections, Profes Fyodorov will present himself as an opponent of the commuas an opponent of the communists and a reasonable afternative to President Boris the extreme nationalist Vadi-

His Party of Working exander Lebed, the charis-recople's Self-government ad-matic former commander of eigh patients to subsidise opconcept of

"people's capitalism" and links, the liberal economist: He built an enormous list of remains essentially loyal to under the figure's cloak. I condemns the high tax and Sergei Mavrodi, the patients in Moscow, and his former master, portraying laughed together with the doregime of the monetarists and wealthy founder of the opened a network of hospitals. Mr Yeltsin as a democrat who nators. They also laughed."

News in brief

Picasso theft at airport

Three prized works of art two Picassos and a Pissarro - were stolen from New York's JFK airport last week after a baggage handling com-pany allegedly neglected to arrange security for them, writes Ian Katz in New York. The two paintings and a drawing valued at £10 mil-lion, were brought into the United States by a Mexican businessman last Thursday. Told at the airport that he eeded special documents, he left the works with an Aeromexico agent, who reportedly passed them to a baggage han-

Killer blizzards

Severe blizzards on China's remote Qinghai plateau have killed at least 42 people and injured 40,000, an official report said yesterday. — AP. Haitian handover

Port-au-Prince took on a carnival air as Halti prepared for its first transition from one democratically elected president to another today. René Préval is to succeed Jean-Bertrand Aris-tide, on the 10th anniversary of the fall of Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier. — Reuter.

Robbing the rich

Algeria's prime minister day that the pay of better-paid civil servants would be docked till the end of the year to give several months' backpay to 200,000 lower-income employees. — Reuter.

Dolphins in danger Fewer than 100 Yangize river greater protection, Chinese experts say. - AP.

Kids Go Free at Half Term

din, the prime minister, has been proposed by a group in St Petersburg as a rival candi-5 per cent of votes cast nationally needed to enter the state date to Mr Yeltsin. Prof Fyodorov, aged 68, rose to national fame almost 10 years ago by designing a con-veyor-belt system for delicate candidates, many more char-ismatic and richer than he. eye surgery, reducing the cost of laser technology on operations for myopia. His work became so famous the extreme nationalist Vladi-mir Zhirinovsky; General Al-state allowed him to use hard the 14th Army, Grigori Yaverations on Russian patients.

senger ship into peripatetic operating theatres. But his brand of Yugoslavstyle capitalism has been overtaken by events, and his potential rivals for the centrist ticket have much more powerful financial backers. Georgi Karasin, a foreign ministry spokesman, added to the pre-election intrigue yes-terday when he upbraided Vyacheslav Kostikov, the president's former press secretary, for remarks about Mr Yeltsin.

Mr Kostikov is the Russian ambassador to the Vatican, and has given a series of out-spoken interviews on television and in the press to boost

"Yeltsin is a man of power. Power is his ideology, his friend, his concubine, his mistress, his passion. Everything that goes beyond that, beyond the struggle for power, concerns him much less."

But in his book Mr Kostikov makes digs at General Alexander Korzhakov, Mr Yeltsin's bodyguard, and Mikhail Barsukov, head of the Federal Security Service. He writes that he received a statue of a Franciscan monk from the two men when he took up his appointment at the Vatican.

"But when you bend the figure slightly backwards, an sales of his memoirs.

In the book, Mr Kostikov let colour appeared from Monster haunts Florence again after legal doubt

John Hooper in Rome

HE city of Florence gave an immense col-lective sigh of relief when an elderly Tuscan farmer was led weeping from court 15 months ago to begin a life sentence for murder. The jury had de-cided that Pietro Pacciani, aged 69, was the Monster of Florence, the serial killer responsible for at least seven double murders between 1968 and 1985.

But a senior prose told an appeal court yesterday that the state no longer believed the evidence on which Pacciani was convicted. "As things stand, the adequacy of the evidence is neither certain nor even probable," Piero Tony He asked the appeal struck, one possible conclu-sion to be drawn from yes-terday's about-turn is chill-ing: the serial killer who ted of two murders. Mr Tony said he wanted further tests on an exploded bullet, of the same calibre as the murder weapon, which was found listic evidence, but added that unless the tests proved Pacciani's guilt they should order his immediate release.

Providing the "Monster" has not died since he last struck one possible consult.

stalked one of the world's most popular tourist desti-nations is still at large. Pacciani was tried for the murder of 16 people, mostly courting couples, all shot with a .22 Beretta pistol in the hills around Florence. The killer's gruesome trademark was to cut off the pubic hair and part of one breast of his women victims. Pacciani was acquit-judges to authorise new weapon, which was found capable of having sexual tests on a vital piece of bal- on Pacciani's property.

client immediately.

Pacciani's trial split

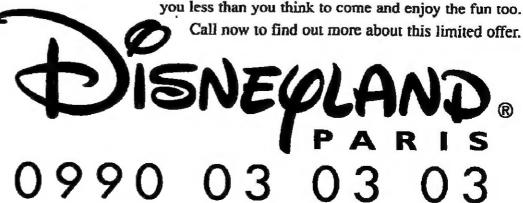

Italy. He tearfully pleaded his innocence and the evi-dence against him was almost wholly circumstan-tial. A key reason for the prosecution's change of heart was that Pacciani did not fit the psychiatric profile provided by experts.

Mr Tony conceded that Pacciani "combined a good deal of the worst in human nature". He had served prison sentences for raping both his daughters, and for sexually assaulting a woman friend and stabbing her lover to death. Yet psychologists giving evidence at his trial agreed that the "Monster" was someone in ing and dams — unless given

From now until April 4th, 1996, we'll give you complimentary accommodation, breakfast and unlimited Park entry, for each 3-11 year old sharing with a paying adult. And with prices starting at just £81' per adult for a two-day break, it'll cost you less than you think to come and enjoy the fun too.

 Department of the state of t
To receive your free Divacyland Paris Brochuse, send the completed coupon to: Disneyland Paris Direct, FREEPOST, Bristol, BS38 7HN.
Name: (Mr/Mrv/Misv/Ms)
Home address:
Postcode:Telephone:
From time to true, we may wish to send you additional mailings. If you do not want to receive these, please tock this box.
Ref No. GT (TREE

But - oh, by the way, it's all right to start sentences with prepositions — I decided to conduct my own check-up of the language, as spoken and written across TV, theatre, literature, pop, newspapers, politics and radio.

Forget the small change

British Gas's problems go deeper than perks

will doubtless grab most of the headproach the tenth anniversary of privatiforced by public outrage to return to shareholders and customers some of its monopoly profits: the nuclear industry has stopped building nuclear plants because they are uneconomic: the second biggest privatised coal company was yesterday put into administration and the Confederation of Coal Producers complains that "take-or-pay" gas contracts have caused the unnecessary closure of many collieries and the loss of thousands of jobs. To cap it all British Gas said that following the longterm contracts it had entered into (with potential losses of up to £1.5 billion) it had decided to split the group into two one part containing its assets (exploration and pipelines) and the other its liabilities (gas trading and supply). It presumably hopes that by plopping Its huge liabilities into one company it will negotiate a better deal with its suppliers from a position of weakness. Maybe.

British Gas must carry the can for the appalling state it has got itself into. but the Government itself bears a big share of the responsibility. In 1986 it privatised BG with its monopoly powers intact. Some, including this newspaper, argued for it to be split into smaller parts and exposed to competition. The Government was talked out of it by BG and it was sold as a single monopoly. In this way the Treasury got a higher price than it would have if negotiation of contracts compelling it to take gas at a fixed price even if it didn't want it was crazy economically, but safe financially as long as BG kept its dling around with the small change.

CEDRIC BROWN'S premature' retire- monopoly of purchasing and distribument as chief executive of British Gas | tion. But when the Government reacted to public outrage by removing BG's lines today following all the "fat cat" monopoly it left a time-bomb in its allegations about him. But it should not | accounts in the form of £40 billion disguise the much more serious state of worth of supply contracts stretching the entire energy market as we apover 20 years. The Government introduced competition on the commercial sation. The electricity industry is being side — which resulted in BG's domestic market share slumping from 90 per cent in 1990 to only 35 per cent in 1994. More recently, it has decided to open the domestic market to competition (from April), which may lead to price cuts of 10 to 15 per cent with goodness knows what effect on BG's domestic market

> The Government has achieved the unlikely double of enraging stockholders, whose shares fell by 34 per cent last year relative to the FT index, and consumers who have been upset by the boardroom perks snapped up by top executives as a reward for getting the industry into serious difficulties. One consequence of the take-or-pay gas con-tracts is they have to be paid for anyway, the supplies have been accepted and fed into the national electricity pool at the expense of coal-fired supplies thereby triggering unnecessary pit closures.

This is the price we have had to pay for the complete absence of an energy policy other than privatisation. It is still not a free market. The National Grid (which has problems of its own arising from excess profits and shortage of capacity) accepts supplies first from nuclear stations (because they have to be operated around the clock). second from gas (because of the take-and-pay clauses), third from the under-sea link from France and only as a last competition had been introduced. BG's resort from Britain's much diminished coal industry. Compared with these problems the (justifiable) furore over Cedric Brown's salary is merely fid-

All's Right with the welfare state

Kenneth Clarke scores high on politics but low on vision

LET the Chancellor be judged by his | minister might have been promising to own yardstick. According to his keenly-anticipated speech on the welfare state tainly Sir Keith Joseph used to do so in his yesterday. Kenneth Clarke spoke of the I term at Health and Social Security. But social support that is needed in a mod- not any more. Billed as a major defence ern flexible economy: "People need to be of the welfare state, the Chancellor's reassured more than ever before that, through thick and thin, their health will be looked after, their children educated, and a safety net provided for their old age and periods of involuntary unemployment.

Well is it? The health headlines over the last three months show how far short his ambition falls in the NHS: ministers suggesting people should budget for £10,000 to cover the cost of residential or nursing home care in cardiac rehabilitation centres operates screenings as almost one in three health authorities start explicit rationing of treatments. Yesterday's annual report from the Chief Inspector of million pensioners to turn to income just been cut from 12 to 6 months.

speech was mostly devoted to the need to reduce public expenditure below 40 per cent — and his expectation that this will be achieved by 1997/98. There were no new ideas, new options, or new welfare-to-work models set out. There were not even the detailed statistics which Peter Lilley has used to justify reining in welfare. For the record it is worth repeating that the UK was seventeenth out of 21 OECD member states in the last intertheir old age; more than one in three national league table in the proportion of GDP spent on social protection an age limit; and a cutback in routine (health, social security and education). It was the UK which took the lead in Europe in cutting benefits, a move which left the poorest tenth 17 per cent worse off in real terms. No other indus-Schools shows children are not being trialised state has suffered such a adequately educated: half of all primary | regressive redistribution from poor to schools and two-fifths of secondary rich. In the words of another Conserva-schools are failing to teach children to a tive, Sir Ian Gilmour "the sacrifice satisfactory standard. Last month's upon the poor produced nothing miracreport from the Anson Committee ulous except for the rich". And yet, far shows the degree to which the basic from saying these regressive moves pension has shrunk. It is now worth must be reversed, the leading liberal only 15 per cent of average earnings | Tory spent most of his time yesterday requiring almost two million of the 10 | protecting his back from the right."Big government is out - limited governsupport. And unemployment pay has ment is in." Or put another way: large vision is over, stick to narrow ambition In an earlier era, even a Conservative | and limited horizons.

Politics at the popping crease

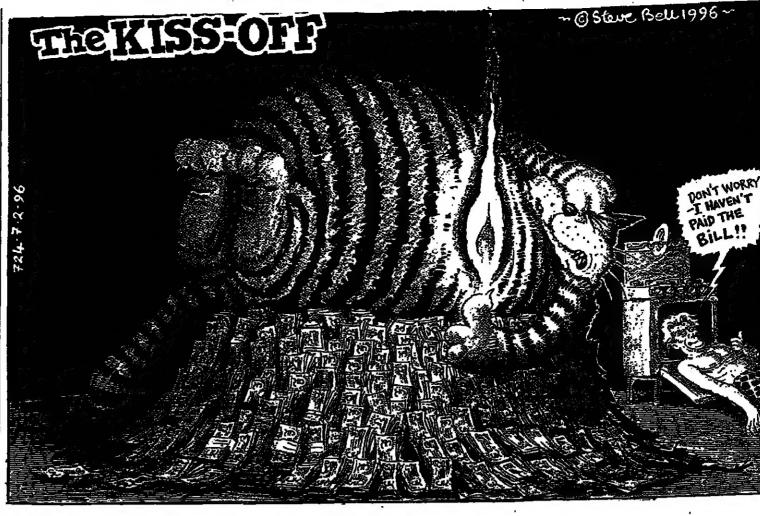

Aussie refusal to go to Colombo is but the start of the problem

THE AUSTRALIAN decision to ask for | tralian Cricket Board's decision. The their World Cup fixture to be moved away from Sri Lanka was not particu- has upset Colombo further. Their larly wimpish. It is less than a week request for rescheduling is based, they since a massive bomb attack in Co-lombo showed the deadly power of the tion". This can only heighten Sri Lan-Tamil Tigers to evade security. Official assurances that the World Cup teams will be given the protection normally afforded to heads of state are not contheir ability to penetrate such cordons. and the Cup offers a tempting target. Cricketers expect to face hostile action at the crease rather than outside it. But Colombo's unhappiness is understandable. Australia's Foreign Minister Gareth Evans has been ill advised to get himself involved, bringing down threats from his Sri Lankan counterpart that any official action by Canberra will be regarded as a "hostile party in Bombay, are denouncing Pakiact." Mr Evans has denied any interference while siding openly with the Aus- that axis would mean disaster.

West Indian Cricket Board of Control kan feelings that there is a conspiracy against them.

The World Cup is about money and prestige as well as about principle: the vincing. Suicide bombers have shown | decision in 1993 to locate in the subcontinent was swayed by the finance on offer. The Aussies and West Indians should be prepared to pay compensation for the loss which Colombo will suffer. They have also offered to forfeit points, which may give Sri Lanka instant access to the quarter-finals. This will not be an easy contest anyhow. Hindu extremists in India, encouraged by leaders of the extremist Shiv Sena stan's participation. Any disturbance on

Letters to the Editor

The politics of jargon

AD you not explained in a footnote to his article that Philip Gould is a "key Labour strate-gist", I believe I would have guessed as much (Class worr-iers, February 5). For

● In authentic New Labour style, not a mention of policy — and the word itself used only twice, and then with negtive connotations.

 Management-speak incon-tinence much in evidence; Gould's prose is awash with purpose, values, trust, conviction, vision, listening, participation, etc. etc. A pious fel-low, being much given to platitudinising he probably does not realise the offence that even the most cynical Guardian reader takes at his declaration, post-Harman, that "winning trust ... is about backing up what we say with what we do".

 Intellectual mediocrity blind to the likelihood that Labour's somewhat restored fortunes owe more to the sheer awfulness of the Tories than to Blairite "modernisa-tion", and prope to lapses into out-and-out fatuity: This is not 1966. It is 1996. New Labour is a new party for new JW Attenborough. 6 Spltal Street.

AKEN together, the articles by Philip Gould wiction and Mark Seddon (Warnings yes Mr Gou from across the world. February 5) nicely illustrate the contrast between the positive and forward-looking New Labour and the negative, oldfashioned reflexive opposi-tionism of Old Labour.

Philip Gould's article demonstrates an express concern for re-connecting with Labour's traditional electoral base. By contrast. Seldon's piece is negative — recalling the claims of betrayal before the votes are counted and before Tony Blair makes his way to Buckingham Palace. His piece is peppered with vague references to a "lurch to the right" and discredited theories, and full of the tortu-ous, often impenetrable language that has alienated Labour voters in the past: Paradoxically (to use Mr Seddon's favourite word) he acknowledges that "Labour stands on the threshold of a spectacular election victory". That Tony Blair has achieved this without the likes of Mr Seddon is clear. So why, pray, should New Labour listen to him now? John Bartle. Department of Government, University of VALUES ... honesty, conviction and vision" — yes, yes Mr Gould, but we've been listening to this mood music for two and a half years now and it's getting to be as irri-tating as the umpteenth repe-tition of a TV ad. Could we now have something differ-ent please? C C Wrigley.

Over Chess. Rickmansworth Road, Chorleywood, Herts WD3 5SB.

PHILIP Gould and Roy Hattersley (Endpiece, February 5) — and indeed Tony Blair himself — might carry a little conviction if they stopped mouthing off. As Gould himself says: "Winning trust . . . is about backing up what we say with what we

They could make a start by answering Suzanne Moore's 10 questions (February 1) and go on to one or two others. Would Labour introduce a graduate tax as a means of funding a further expansion of higher education? Would Labour tax child benefit so as to make more resources available for the less affluent? Richard Jameson. 11 Malting Lane, Aldbury, Tring,

Language school

FOLLOWING your recent correspondence about su perfluous apostrophe's and prepositions outside of all reason: far more serious are misused or, more frequently mis-non-used hyphens, which can cause ambiguity and even change of sense. Thus a "black cab driver" may be a black cab-driver or a black cab driver (and either may be a black black-cab driver); and who would prefer a cam-corder with low light sensitivity to one with low-light sensitivity?

Pymers Mead. ondon SE21 8NQ.

AND let's not forget spoken English: I have lost count of the number of times recently I have beard people on Radio 4 pronouncing "sixth" as "sikth". I was be-ginning to wonder if there was a number "sik", but then a thought occurred to me: could the fall in standards be a precursor to the privatisaton of the English language? A Wylie.

4 Haddington Place, Edinburgh EH7 4AE.

As FOR those complaining of bad spellings; for years I have used an American word-processor program with a US English dictionary. So common words appear as rec-ognize. plow, color and, of course, program. The spelling is locical and simple. I wonder why we didn't adopt it years ago. Iain Sutherland.

5 Gold Mead Close, Lymington, Hants SO41 3FQ.

it's a set-up

WAS concerned by the ab-sence of Manchester from the English Tourist Board movie map (Arts, February 3). In particular this omitted Albert Finney's fine film Charlie Bubbles. This has two icons of our time: Liza Min-nelli seducing Albert Finney in the Piccadilly Hotel, and a visit to Manchester United's ground. As they also missed out the scenes in Lolita filmed bizarrely in the Kent suburbs, put this down to the Board's philistine understanding of cinema, and not southern bias. Chris Jeffries. 1 Queens Road, Cheadle Hulme.

Cheshire SK3 5HG.

Chairman Mao lends an ear

THE pickling of Chairman Mao (Beijing Diary, February 5) was certainly less than perfect. Some years ago, one of his ears detached itself and lay beside him looking like a dried mushroom. HE pickling of Chairman | of face, far worse than Mao's

The Chinese were in an exquisite state of embarrass ment, because to notice and repair this defect implied an admission that it had hap-pened — an unthinkable loss lasting well.

Alison Prince. Burnfoot, Whiting Bay, Isle of Arran KA27 8QL,

Bad sports

ORD Thomson's assertion Lithat public interest is best served when popular sports events are screened on terres-trial television channels (Foul in the box. February 8) is an interesting, if unoriginal, restatement of the argument against allowing BSkyB to buy ever more rights.

However, isn't this the same Lord Thomson who, as chairman of the Independent chairman of the Independent Broadcasting Authority, pre sided over the collusion be-tween ITV and BBC to keep football off our television screens for six months in 1985, so that the two broadcasters could drive down the price they paid for football

Lord Thomson might also remember that it took the intervention in 1988 of the now defunct satellite service, BSB, to force ITV and BBC to compete with each other for sports rights, ending the cosy duopoly that had existed for so long. I am not aware of any initiative by Lord Thomson's IBA to end this grossly unfair

Lynton Guest. 7A Cheniston Gardens, London W8 6TG.

Please include a full postal address, even on e-mailed letters, and a telephone numbe We may edit letters: shorter ones are more likely to appear.

Greek farce loss of ear. The dilemma was solved, so they say, by an American barbarian who remarked loudly in the crowded mausoleum: "Hey, the guy's ear's fallen off."

Goodness gracious.
The superglue seems to be

HE personal attack on me by James Pettifer (Letters, February 3), under the head-line, "The dishonourable con-sul", was unworthy of your newspaper. Scarcely any of the factual statements or innuendoes relate to the truth. The British Embassy in Athens did not attempt to stop publication of Professor Karakasidou's book. Our role was limited to answering some questions put to us by Cambridge University Press about attitudes in Greece to the subject of the book, and the record of attacks on British lives and property here. We answered honestly, and stand by our answers. Mr Pettifer says that I attacked his recent book on Greece. I have never done so. I or a half-finished wild landdo not regard Mr Pettifer as a scape park. And foraging for "trouble-maker" or his book as a problem and I have carpany of wild boar, darktainly never discussed it with Foreign Office colleagues, ex-cept in passing to point out some factual errors.

The issue of academic freedom is an important one, but naturally not the one on which the press sought our advice. An emotional reaction is understandable, but I was saddened to see the good name of St Antony's College associated with such a torrent of cliches.

Ambassador. British Embassy, Athens.

Shephard and Woodhead assessed and found wanting plays in the performance of our schools (Nearly half of schools falling, February 6). It is no doubt a sense of shared guilt that leads to this

Mr Woodhead has a direct responsibility for the millions wasted by the Schools Exami-nation and Assessment Council the National Curriculum Council and now the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority, in providing us with a National Curriculum that did not work and tests and assessments which par-ody their proclaimed function.

There was a time that the post of Her Majesty's Chief In-spector was prized for its in-tegrity and independent com-mitment to educational standards. It is sad to see this apparently being exchanged for a minor acting role in the Government's pre-election campaign. Robert Back.

13 Wheeldon Avenue, Derby DE22 1HP.

CHRIS WOODHEAD has onever been a primary school teacher, yet, as Chief HMI, he regularly pronounces on those of us who persist at this most demanding of occupations. Whenever primary schools are mentioned, comment is usually restricted to saying how badly they are doing. I, for one, am tired of Adrian Townsend

New Hinksey First School. Vicarage Ro Oxford OXI 4RQ.

AM not at all surprised that Chris Woodhead and Gillian Shephard fall to emphasise the part that under-funding children watching 26 hours of TV a week, those with TV sets in their bedrooms, those with out a book in the home, and those who are allowed to roam the streets until all

And would learning prove if there were no TV before 9am, none from 4.30 till 7pm — to allow for bomework, tea, and family conver-sation — and an evening cur-few for children, with times related to age? Bill Moore. Bradford Dale, Youlgrave, Derbyshire.

PETER LUFF should take heart in Chris Woodhead's Ofsted report, for presumably only around 50 per cent of teenage girls will be able to read and comprehend these explicit magazines (Publishin teenagers' magazines, February 6), with a good proportion of the literate balf having the moral security of selective schools and traditional values to protect them. Rodney Hedley.

London SE5 8LY. SEE Chris Woodhead thinks the main problem in primary education is 15,000 poor teachers. My husband has been poor ever since he be-came a teacher 25 years ago. Could a decent pay rise improve the situation? K Cotter. 10 Lauds Road, Northampton NN6 7TJ.

United we shall withstand

Tessa stars in the revival of DIY. February 6). In today's increasingly insecure and hostile workplace, where working people are vulnera-ble to harassment, bullying and discrimination, the role of unions is crucial in promoting and protecting the rights of all people at work Unions legitimately negotiate and campaign for decent pay and conditions for their members. They also provide a wide range of the type of services he claims they do not, such as legal advice and representation.

For example, had Mr Hodg-kinson done any research, he would have discovered that unions won £304 million for individuals who were injured | London WC1B 3LS.

TOM HODGKINSON be at work last year. And every trays a breathtaking ignover, trade unions take rance of modern trade unions around 120,000 personal injury cases, and tens of thou-sands of employment-rights cases, to industrial tribunals.

Most TUC unions also offer vice on non-work issues with the Law Society.

These legal services are all provided at a fraction of the ost that lawyers would charge. Perhaps Mr Hodgkinson should talk to some of these people to see whether they would swap the protection of their union for the jungle of individual deals he advocates. John Monks. General Secretary, Trades Union Congress.

A Country Diary

EXTREMADURA, SPAIN: | against the snowy slopes of such exhilarating vistas plus 11 bird species entirely new to me — that it would be invidious to single out one overriding image. The dehesa is a sight to see: a vast, open forest of pollarded cork and holm-oaks with something of the character of a savannah skinned, semi-domesticated pigs and white cattle, was a hewildering collage of birds: small family parties of wintering cranes stalking donnishly between the trees, spotless starlings (with black velvet plumage instead of the sheeny satin of our species); egrets and storks, great grey shrikes on the fences, black-shouldered kites hovering above the roads like enormous pie-bald kestrels, and flocks of great bustards, the size of turkeys, strung out like a frieze

Five wet winter days in the the Sierra de Gredos. But evergreen wood pastures of there is a bird that lingers on south-west Spain produced the sense buds longer, the azure-winged magpie, a smaller cousin of our much-demonised bird, with sky-blue wings and tail, pinkish body and sooty-black crown. They are extravagant creatures. and huge fun - gregarious, noisy, restless, and given to elegant exotic plumage. It is odd that they are here at all. Their main, and only other, centre of population is in eastern Asia, 6,000 miles away. and it's been suggested that they may have been intro-duced to Spain by sailors com-ing back from China. Yet their distribution isn't expanding (which usually happens with successful introductions) and they contrive to look both touchingly incongruous in this archaic habitat and absolutely at home. I would bet they are a true relic popula-tion, happy in a habitat that has barely changed in the past 4,000 years.

RICHARD MABEY

Nort

៊ូក្នេក 1116211 Cilian

A S

100

Out of

 $\{(i_1,\dots,i_r)$

JF 2

Matthew Norman

HE star of my old friend Mandy Mandelson shines ever more brightly. In succession to Joy Johnson, the MP for Hartlepool has been put in charge of all party cam-paigning (not, as before, merely the election run-up). An oddly reticent Mr Tony Blair has mentioned the appointment only to the Shadow Cabinet, which heard the news on Friday. On Monday — fully a day after Mandy told a newspaper he wanted to stop being "a fixer" and become "a serious politician" — he arrived at the new communications HQ on Millbank. After a wittily self-parodic opening speech (the team's work must be characterised, he said, by "openness and honesty"), the scene took on the aura of Hello bolly! "I'm glad to be back, said Mandy, who had the job (officially) under Neil Kinnock. "I wish I'd never left." At this, usually icy Blair-apparatchik Margaret McDonagh cooed: 'We wish you'd never left, Mandy." Less thrilled, how-ever, will be Patsy Prescott: at last time of checking, the Labour chump was official campaign chief. General secretary Tom Sawyer may also regret this transfer of power from Walworth Road to Mandy Millbank.

HE Diary wishes to end the distasteful speculation about Lord Wyatt of Weeford's contribution to yesterday's Broadcasting Bill debate. Woody, as TV viewers noted, spoke with enormor eloquence ("Sky B. err . . . Sky B, umm . . . Sky television . . ." was one purple patch) about Sky Sports' fine contribution to British sport, and he did so from the heart. He did not do so because Rupert Murdoch pays him over £200,000 a year for a weekly column in the Times, and a fortnightly one on page 48 of the News of the World. Let that be an end to it.

AM now leaving my daily phone message for Dr Julian Lewis, the Tory radio ham, in a demented whisper; if, as suspected, he is in the clutches of Central Office infiltrators, they must not overhear. It's completely illogical, of course, but what place does logic have in the heart of a frantic friend?

CCORDING to Julian's boss, Tory Chairman Brian Mawhinney, co-ordination is vite): areens of government must synchronise their proments for maximum impact and minimum embarrassment. Take last Wednesday. One minute, the Chief Inspector of Schools made the sparklingly original call for "a return to traditional teaching methods", and the next — by way of drumming home the point about fall-ing standards — Mr Mawhinney put out a press release that concluded: "Yet again, Labour is exposed as a party which does not prac-tice what it preaches." Tut, tut. Must try harder.

that the fraudster Darius Guppy has been released from prison early after com-pensation of £165,500 was paid into a Lloyd's syndicate. The money was paid, according to the tabloids, by "a mystery man". It couldn't be, could it? I rang Boris the Jackal Johnson, Darius's close friend, yesterday, but he wasn't there "The guy nor's gawn out," said a wheezy, almost rasping voice in his office. "E's gavin dahn the Blind Beg-gar to meet a man about a singin' lesson, if you knaw wha' I meen. Ha ha ha. But ah'll tell 'im you called. You watch out for yourself, my son . . and stay lucky."

AM delighted to note

hall withstand

HE column of my old friend Sir John Junor in the Mail on Sunday causes alarm. Sir John's old profilem with question marks is getting out of band, and the old boy now find; it near impossible to end any sentence without one in last week's effort, he contrived 15, with no fewer than six in the lead item alone. I will monitor the situation closely from now on. and he moment the ques-tion mark count reaches 20, will personally take him to a support group for compulsive question-askers. For mus it not be a terrible burden for a man to be unable to make up his mind about anything? I only ask.

Cashing in on the North Sea bubble

Commentary

Will Hutton

O AT LEAST one Conservative cabinet minister has been brave enough to come to the defence of the welfare state -and for that act of singular political courage the Chancel-lor deserves some praise. But such are the terms of the debate in the Conservative Party that Mr Clarke's speech yesterday still implies that education, health and socialeducation, health and social-security spending will come under heavy pressure in the years ahead. It is some com-fort that the pressure is less than it might have heen; but no one should be confident that Mr Clarke's atfachment to the concept of the welfare state will be backed by suffi-cient action to halt its current rate of attrition.
The Conservative Party's

priority over welfare spend-ing is not need, social cohesion or even affordability — for the funds, as you will see, are there to finance a more generous welfare system if we choose. Rather, just as Sta-lin's planners decided that stances, the central planners in the Conservative Party have arbitrarily decided that government expenditure should fall below 40 per cent of GDP. This is to be the yardstick of the good society — not, for example, class sizes, the speed of response of fire brigades to emergencies, hos-pital waiting-lists or well-stocked public libraries.

Indeed few politicians and even fewer commentators eem to be aware just how extraordinarily tight the Gov-ernment's spending plans are ernment's spending plans are for the next three years. Mr Clarke may not have announced that he wants to get public spending down to 35 per cent of GDP — he knows it's crazy — but anybody with a stake in public services, consumer or worker alike, should be chilled by his commitment to keep public spending "more or less constant" over the next three years.

Thus unlike the wider econ-

Thus unlike the wider economy, growing at its average annual rate of around 2 per cent (miserable enough), the public sector is to be frozen. Ambitions to recruit more teachers or rehabilitate more prisoners — the kinds of ex-penditure one might expect as Britain grows richer — are killed stone-dead. Instead, the story will be of a public sector struggling to offer minimal pay rises to its staff, financed by job losses and a deteriorat-steel production should ing service. Already the loss double whatever the circum- of 3,000 prison officers, the strains in the fire service and the ending of the readingrecovery programme bear tes timony to what lies ahead. This comes on top of benefit rates which are continually falling back in relation to average earnings and to which entitlement is ever tougher. The continual leeching of youth-training programmes and the cut-back in TEC budand the cut-back in TEC bud-gets are well-known. Free dentistry and eye services have long since gone, and for-mal and informal rationing in the NHS grows. Tertiary education is in near crisis as ex-penditure per student falls ca-lamitously — hence the vice-chancellors' flirtation with charging undergraduates £300 entry fees. This is the "strong welfare state" to which the Chancellor claims he is attached, and which he believes is the handmaiden of flexibility. ty because it reduces fear and opposition to change.

Yet to argue for better invites the inevitable charge that it has to be paid for — and that in turn allegedly means higher income tax. Every radio and TV inter-viewer in the land, faithfully rehearsing Central Office's lines in the name of "bal-ance", knows how to turn up the heat on anybody who dares to challenge the idea that depredation, dilapidation and decay have to be the order of the day. It is a false ter of what it was 10 years ago of their tax payments.

Forget falling oil prices; structure rots - taxation for any pound of North Sea oil profit is a quartor of the day. It is a false ter of what it was 10 years ago sive as it is unjust.

premise. Income tax provides only a quarter of all tax reve-nue. Indeed, it could even be cut and still there are potential funds in abundance to fi-nance the kind of welfare state the British want.

For example, unremarked and largely unreported, there is a boom in North Sea oil and gas production which already comfortably exceeds any year in the 1980s and will do so for the rest of the decade. Yet the tax yield is derisory - even to the point where the tax-payer is subsidising more new wild-cat oil-well drilling in British waters than in any other oil province in the world. The usual explanation for declining oil revenues is falling oil and gas prices, but an important paper sent to me recently by Sheffield University's Ian Rutledge and Philip Wright shows how that is only partly true: the real only partly true; the real driver of the extraordinary collapse in oil revenues is what they describe as "the weakest petroleum taxation regime in the world".

VER the past 12 years the Government has emasculated the tax system bequeathed it by the 1974-79 Labour government. Oil royalties have been abolished. alties have been abolished.
Advance petroleum revenue tax (PRT) has been phased out. In 1993 PRT for old fields was halved and abolished for new fields. Exploration, appraisal and, amazingly, development costs can be offset between fields. With the lowering of corporation tax to 33 per cent, some companies with smaller fields are being subsidised by the taxpayer, with Rutledge and Wright citing Ranger Oil as just one of many that seem to have recovered a substantial part alties and a stricter system of reliefs, the take could in-crease significantly again. The net effect is that Britain comes second in the world league table for lax taxation of oil revenues prepared by the Geneva based oil consultants Petroconsultants. The Govern-ment takes just 33 per cent of oil-company cash flows, lower only than Ireland. But as Peregimes when the prospects for discovery are poor and the infrastructure for landing. refining and shipping oil is weak. Extraordinarily and weak. Extraortunarily and alone Britain represents the opposite; a light tax regime along with good discovery prospects and infrastructure—hence the sobriquet of being the world's weakest petroleum tax regime.

Oil and gas executives deny the undeniable, but North Sea extraction rates give the lie to their protestations that the tax regime is just. If there were 15 years of oil reserves at current production levels in 1983, now there are fewer than five with a similar pattern for gas. The industry is exploiting North Sea reserves of oil and gas mercilessly because the tax is so light — and before the regime changes.

And if the Government had an ounce of propriety the regime would be toughened. What is the case for accelerating the depletion of British reserves of hydrocarbons, minimising the tax take and running an ever more threadbare welfare state as a result These islands have become milch cow as our social infrastructure rots - and all against a chorus that there is no alternative. It is as offen-

- and gross trading profits are actually higher! Just restoring the tax regime to where it stood in 1987 would deliver another 13 billion of revenues; and if we choose to be tougher, restoring oil roy. wickedness

David McKie

T THE TOP of the stairs which lead to the committee corridors of the Lords and Commons there's an area where MPs sponsor exhibitions to further causes they favour. Last week, at the invitation of the SDLP MP Eddie McGrady, it had a display from the Linen Hall Museum, Belfast, of printed sources on the state of Ireland between the census years of 1841 and 1851; the decade of the great famines,

With its graphic accounts in words and sketches of immense human suffering, its bold posters advertising the sale of the goods of the broken and dispossessed, and its letters of desperate appeal to politicians in London to intervene before further disasters occurred, the exhibition carried the not-so-subliminal message: this is what West-minster did to the people of Ireland — or at least, what it condoned. But perhaps the most instructive exhibit got there by accident. It's a frontpage editorial commentary from the Illustrated London News of August 1848. "Nothing," the paper wrote, "is more pitiless than a theory. Nothing is more cruel than a political or social enthusiast. when he meets with obstacles to the establishment or even the trial of his schemes of social and political regeneration." These words were writ-ten not about Ireland — they are on display only because sketches from Ireland appear below - but about France. and specifically about the evolution of Robespierre — in the grip of an ideology which effaced everything — from Houest Incorruptible to the architect of the Terror.

their deaths, even if citizens ent in our nistory would have been taxed to surmount. Even as they denied the pleas of their subordinates on the ground for greater generosity, they believed they were doing their best for the people. Even the great John Bright warned the Commons in 1848 of the ponse to Ireland's difficulties: a man of high and indisputable Christian virtue, but as Macaulay (whose sister he married) said of him: "His mind is full of schemes of moral and political improvement, and his zeal boils over in his talk."

Hunger, contains much more of that kind, above all from Charles Trevelyan, assistant

Revisionist historians have quarrelled with Woodham-Smith, but Trevelyan's own Smith, but Trevelyan's own words establish him. What worried him perpetually was that aid would only feed dependence. The Irish were paying the price for their fecklessness. They must learn to stand on their own two feet (were while they were duing (even while they were dying on them). "The greatest evil we have to contend with." he wrote in December 1846, "is not the physical evil of the famine, but the moral evil of the selfish, perverse and tur-bulent character of the

Whatever the people's suf ferings, the laws of the mar-ket must not be gainsaid. Was food exported while Ireland starved? That must continue free trade must survive. Was food being sold by private enterprise at prices most im-poverished households could never afford? Those prices must not be undercut by gov-ernment intervention, for that would interfere with the market. Were the costs of poor relief being sought from communities which could never conceivably pay them? They must pay even so. As Trevelyan's closest ally, the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Charles Wood, wrote to the Lord Lieutenant, the Earl of Clarendon: "Arrest, remand do anything you can - send horse, foot and dragoons, all the world will applaud you, and I should not be so squeamish as to what I did, to the verge of the law and a little beyond." In time, Trevelyan found a convenient catch-all formula. The sufferings of the Irish, he said, were to be blamed on "the operation of natural causes".

The operation of natural causes; to which, by definition, There Is No Alternative. architect of the Terror.

The British politicians and civil servants responsible for Ireland through the famine years were no Robespierres.

Of what recent period in British history does that remind you? Woodham-Smith was writing in 1962, when Margaret Thatcher was a mere par-They did not order citizens to liamentary secretary, and John Redwood was 11 and died through their inactivity. Michael Portillo nine. "Much They were dealing with a of this obtuseness," she wrote catastrophe which any gov- of British administration in the fanatical faith of mid-19th-century British politicians in the economic doctrine of laissez-faire, no interference by government, no meddling with the operation of natural causes". As those were writ-ten, Butskellism was still the fatal demoralisation of the people which extensive relief might bring.

Cecil Woodham-Smith's classic account. The Great Kenneth Clarke now risks the contempt of much of his Party by continuing to preach. Few thought then that such warn-

Dirty deeds in the east

Norman Stone accuses the German government of mendacity in its dealings with citizens who lost land or property in the country's turbulent decades

Kohl has been ties, the state took the land away from the peasants, and set up collectives.

The former owners are a he is not, at the moment, well-placed to be making such les-sons, for his government has presided over a very nasty scandal, a breach of the constitution, over which the Chancellor himself seems to have just lied to the parliament. One very senior for-eign-office man, Dieter Kastrup, who is now German ambassador in Italy, has been arraigned for perjury. The case has reached the European Court of Human Rights at Strasbourg, where a hearing — endlessly put off by Bonn - is soon to take place. And anyone who might suppose that constitutional courts and bills of rights are in themselves a proper answer needs to bear all of this in mind.

The case in question involves a sum of money that could be anywhere from £3,000 million to £10,000 million. It concerns land, fac-East Germany. Between 1945 and 1949, when the East Gerand 1949, when the East German state was formally set up, there was a Soviet military administration, which presided over a supposed land-reform. Any estate greater than 250 acres was divided up; the forest land court supinely accepted this

The former owners are a mixed bag. Some are very grand — Princes of Saxe-Anhalt or Saxe-Coburg (there is a British royal interest, too), a Prince Reuss — with castles to reclaim. Some were no doubt Nazis; others, such as the Bussche-Haddehausen family, resisted Hitler; quite a number refused to join the Nazi Party, but were not part of the active resistance. One or two are Jewish, unable to benefit from the compensation that has otherwise been quite widely available to German Jewish refugees. There are about 11,000 claimants, the majority people who lost a town house or a small manor and a few hundred acres between 1945 and 1949.

erty back when unification happened, in 1990. The Basic Law of West Germany states that private property is guaranteed, and it also states that lion. It concerns land, tar-torles, forests and castles that were expropriated by this or that régime in Germany after 1933. Essentially, it is about some seven million acres in East Germany. Between 1945 for the same nice of land But for the same piece of land. But like. But this was not their aim. They were concerned with the huge tracts of land, with factories and castles, that were in the hands of the state. It had been national-ised, and Bonn took it over in 1990, intending to sell it off. Bonn was adamant the land must not be returned to former owners. True, a compen sation law has been passed. However, it offers 0.8 per cent of the value, in 10 years' time - it is so complicated, in terms of valuations and index-linking and taxation, that owners could conceivably have to pay the government. UST the same, exceptions have been made.

If you are a communal administration or a political party - even the Communists — you get your property back. The American government insisted on proper compensation for American subjects, and obtained a special treaty to this In theory, these people should have had their propeffect in 1990. A British firm claimed back its property in the middle of Dresden, and got nowhere. However, the great Belgian chemical firm, Solvay, threatened to pull its operations right out of Ger-many, and so it got its East German holdings back. Pre-1945 and post-1949 claimants can win, similarly. German citizens, in other words, have not had equal behaviour — a clear case of political justice.

The claimants' case would have been much weaker if there had been any question of evicting innocent occupants from houses, and the political parts from houses, and the political gather ings. It is an odd fact that descendants of the great German property in Germany as they could be a political gather ings. It is an odd fact that descendants of the great German military families — Now, of course you can symptomic their street and political parts are not political justice.

Now, of course you can symptom the political parts are not political justice.

Sollieffer a political gather in the property in Germany as they could be Schlieffen, von der Goltz, Fal-kenhausen — moved in considerable numbers into business: a lawyer for the claimants is a Count Albrecht Schlieffen, who also works for Daimler-Benz. A Herr Kinkel or a Herr Waigel, dealing with the judicial and financial aspecis of property restitution in 1990, would not find it easy to fend off enquiries from them, with their powerful industrial and banking backing.

So the government found another way round. They said that, on unification, the Russians had made it a pre-condition for their agreement that property confiscations would not be reversed. Chancellor Kohl told the Bundestag as much in January 1991. The then chief negotiator of the foreign office, Dieter Kastrup, told the same story to the courts, when they were called in. Kastrup has been accused of perjury; he was let off, on the grounds that he was merely offering a subjective impression, not actual evi-dence. German lawyers are not impressed by this judg-ment; it smells.

But did the Soviet Union But did the Soviet Union the foreign office's own min-make a pre-condition of this utes, with Kastrup present, of kind? Two years ago, Gorba- the negotiations with the Ruschev gave me an interview, and I asked him straight out he answered "no". Shevardnadze, and, latterly, George Bush bore this out of course there was no intention of inwhat the Strasbourg case concerns. Uganda, seeking to make good the depravations are larger than the Russians did want was something else altogether. They wanted to avoid being sued for damage done 1945 and 1949 (of pathise. "The Junkers are back" would not be a welcome slogan. Property was anyway a nightmare; there was also a danger that the East Germans would be driven into a laager, and perpetuate the country's division. Fair enough, but we know now that there were other concerns. Finance, Minister Waigel knew that the unificavery, very expensive - even at £100,000 million per year he underestimated it, for the price is twice as high and the German debt has grown threateningly large. How do you pay for this? The answer was through privatisation of the East German state's hold-ings. This was openly said. early in 1990, by the government, and it was put into the treaty between the two Ger-manies — before anyone had mentioned any alleged Soviet pre-condition.

Since the claimants have cousins with access to gov ernment documents, their lawyers can now give plain evidence for what they say: they can, for instance, adduce sians (who, it turns out, even had to be prodded into de-manding indemnification). On any historian's reading of this story, it is a very nasty one. Bonn had a defensible case. Shabby lies and arro-

Restilutionsverbot (ed Christoph

Good-bye battery

Seiko Kinetic®. The first and only quartz watch: that generates its own energy from your every movement. The perpetual accuracy of quartz naturally, without a battery, its tiny powerhouse converts even your slightest movement into electrical impulses. Ecologically sound and ultimately reliable. Seiko Kinetic is so efficient that you only need to wear it for one day to ensure enough energy reserves to last at least a week. Wear it continually and it will never let you down. It's built to last. Someday all watches will be made this way.

Intellectually

speaking

nects of Giles Playfair.

closest friend, ever since we met him in 1943 when we were members of a small New York group interested in theatre history.

Giles, who had already published his biography of Edmund Kean, and who was in a wartime British government job in Manhattan, was invited to a meeting of the group with his then wife Carol. Subsequently, the Playfairs asked the groun to their Connection the group to their Connecti-cut home for an afternoon, and not long after, invited my wife and I by ourselves.

As soon as the four of us were alone together, we discovered how much we all loathed the other members.

vited for the weekend; we stayed three weeks. We read other books that Giles had published: Singapore Goes Off The Air, about his experiences with the Mahis late father, the distin-guished actor and director, ended, Giles began a criss-cross life, both as to place and vocation. He lived in London, then in the US, then back in London. He broadcast a great deal for the BBC Third Pro-gramme and, in the early 1950s, he was, for a short time, manager of the Royal Court Theatre in London. He taught drama in America, and published another biogra-phy — of the 19th-century theatre phenomenon Master Betty. He and Carol divorced and later he married Ann, societal standards. Two of them were co-written with Derick Sington, an old

Giles Playfair

Mabel Leigh

Feats of clay . . . Mabel Leigh (below right) and (above) a group of Khimara bowls and vases decorated with her Period Pottery design

Fired with enthusiasm

Son during the 1930s. Trained at the prestigious Burslem School of Art by the legendwent on to work at the Royal completed her apprentice-ship under the guidance of Jack Price, the pottery designer and socialist, who was influence her work and life fundamentally.

When Royal Cauldon closed Leigh was offered the son and Newport potteries.

Denise Grey

ABEL LEIGH, Shorter pottery in Stoke-on-who has died Trent. Although still only 18, aged 81, will be remembered for studio, where she trained four talented women painters to decorate her unique pottery. With its naive, ethnic patterns, her Period Pottery, based on designs from the Middle East, Africa and Cen-tral America, reflected the art deco style, and was Shorter's most prestigious ware. It received national acclaim after an exhibition in 1933 in the firm's London

The Shorter group of fac-tories included the Wilkin-

Stepping out

at the Folies

theatre and cinema,

an actress whose career em-

Born near Turin as Edouar dine Verthuy, her father was an architectural supervisor who went to work in Paris

when Denise was four. She began her career as a ren-dense, then took to fashion modelling - in the pioneer days of the cinema this was one of the natural routes into

Grey was east in her first movie role in 1913 (Mademoi-selle Etchika), but it was an engagement at the Folies Ber acre in 1915 that launched in various patriotic tableaux. but when one of the show's stars, a singer called Hilda

May, arrived drunk, Denise a spirited impersonation of her that she was given the

She sharred in the next

revue. A La Parisienne

her. She began as a walk-on and entertainment.

serven acting.

Bizarre ware designed by Clarice Cliff at at Newport. Leigh was strong-minded and fiercely supportive of the young women pottery work-ers. She became increasingly dissatisfied with conditions in Shorter's Victorian factory and the restrictions im-posed on her artistic development. After two intensely productive years she left to work at the Crown Ducal pottery with Charlotte Rhead. After the second world war (when she was in intelligence work), Leigh was employed by Gordon Forsyth to help in

she was a member of the com-pany at the Comedia Française, together with such great figures as Marie Bell, Madeleine Renaud and Jean-as a design contrast and as a the development of the ceconsumer alternative to the ramics export market. She of fun and a capacity for see outrageous Jazz Age and last worked at the Royal Wining beauty and goodness in ton pottery, where she spent many happy and productive years before her premature retirement in 1964. With her beloved husband of fun and a capacity for see-ing beauty and goodness in everything and everyone, Mabel Leigh inspired the af-fection of all who met her. An exhibition of Shorter pot-tery, including a large proportion of her work, toured the museums of South-west England and the Hanley Museum, Stoke-on-Trent in 1992 and 1993. Today, her work is artist she hand-decorated sought and treasured by an tiles for H and G Thynne, but ardent band of collectors.

John, Mabel Leigh renovated an old schoolhouse in North Japanese garden as a baven for wildlife. As a freelance she spent much of her retire ment painting and embroi-dering and tending the innumerable cats which found their way to her doorstep.

Mabel Leigh, potter, born Janu-

A charismatic, lovable per-

Ray McIntire

Cups of plenty

Louis Barrault, specialising in roles such as Dorinne in Tartuffe — she claimed it was her ability to speak with an authentic Normandy accent that made her a success. She also appeared in one of the most successful Franch films tant-Lara's Le Diable Au

Throughout the 1920s and cesses were Harold Et Maude and Claude Pinoteau's The Party, in which she played Sophie Marceau's grandmother. She co-starred with her daughter, Suzanne Grey, and which meluded scenes with Denise Grey . . . sparkling

ENISE GREY, who | such enigmatic titles as A has died aged 99, was | New Adventure Of The Mona Corps (Devil In The Flesh). In 1950 Grey played the mother in George And Margaret. The critic Jean-Jacques Gautier wrote: "As for Denise Lisa, The Triumph Of French Industry and The Revue Fac-tory. After being spotted by Granier, she was given a solo spot at the cabaret La Pied life, she sparkles, she bubbles, she preens, she makes one laugh until the tears come." Grey continued acting until 1991 and among her later suc-

1930s. Grey played on the stage in Paris and in films including Les Bleus De l'Amoui and Adieu, Léonard. But her greatest successes came later in life. After the occupation her great-grand-daughter in a revival of Arsenic And Old

Patrick O'Connor

Denise Grey (Edouardine Verthuy), actress, born Septem

ert Lamoureux's La Soupière.

that God has let me stay awhile on earth," she said in 1991. "I'm going to rest, going to my little seaside house."

"I love life, I am very happy

IXTY TWO years ago, the American the important of polymer. The material was about the maline of polymer. The material was stable, inert, relatively cheap and an extremely good thermal insulator.

With a first two plant at the Dow plant at James River, Virginia, from Michigan as director of technology, a role in which he was concerned with protection.

the accidental invention of rigid polystyrene-foamed the Dow patent, it carved out plastic in the laboratories of the Dow Chemical Company.

His discovery, patented by special moulding and form Grey in the dizzy role of the Dow in 1944 and marketed mother, she brings a breath of under the trade name Styrofoam, is one of the century's outstanding examples of scientific serendipity.

Driven by the shortage of natural latex during the second world war, the Dow laboratory was investigating the synthesis of rubber-like polymers with the aim of developing a good flexible insu-lator. McIntire made a mixture of styrene and isobutene (isobutylene) which he thought would polymerise under pressure to produce a solid but flexible material. There turned out to be more isobutene in the mix than was needed for polymerisation. As pressure was released in his benchtop reactor, the excess isobutene vapourised as tiny bubbles throughout the mixture, acting as what is now known as a "blowing agent" to produce career at the chemical com-a rigid and extremely light-pany. He directed research

Within a few years, under ing techniques were developed, expanded polystyrene appeared in a host of forms, from packaging and spray in-sulation to the ubiquitous office coffee beaker — all of them direct descendants of

LTHOUGH the patent ran out in the late 1950s, and many other large plastics companies produced their own foams, by 1995 Dow alone had 22 major plants throughout the world manufacturing foam materials based on McIntire's discov-ery. The quintessence of a quietly dedicated company man, he received no direct reward for his discovery, continuing to work for Dow at an increasingly senior level until he retired in 1981, having worked his entire tion of innovations and the aquisition of patents and apparent total dedication to science and technology. McIntire had an unexpected breadth of interests and tal ents. He was a great walker, a tory and a gifted singer. For many years he was a member of the Dow chorus, a choir as well-known in America for its public concerts as, for example, the Black Dyke Mills brass band is in Britain.

Ray McIntire was born in Gardner, Kansas, and graduated from the University of Kansas in 1940 with a science degree and engineering hon-ours. He joined Dow from university and settled in Midland, Michigan. He is survived by his wife and by a son, a daughter and four grandchildren.

Anthony Tucker

Ray Mointire, chemical engineer, born August 24, 1918; died February 2, 1996

Oxford chum. Giles had prac-tised briefly as a barrister in the 1930s, and that experi-ence had convinced him of the barbarity and useless ness of punishment and prison. It can't be said that system, but I'm told that such ooks as The Offenders and However, in spite of this Birthdays Gillian Banks, director, Carnegie Inquiry into the Third Age, 63; Caroline Bingham, author, 58; David Brighty.

ambassador to Spain, 57; Dora Bryan, actress, 72; Juliette Gréco, actress and singer, 69; The Earl of Harewood, chairman, English National Opera, 78 Gareth Hunt, actor, 53; Ian Jack, editor, Granta, 51; Peter Jay, economics and business editor, BBC, 59; Sir John Leahy, chairman, Lon-rho, 68; Sammy Lee, footballer, 37; Dr Barbara McGibbon, pathologist, 68; Str Geoff Mulcahy, chairman, Kingfisher, 54; Sir Philip Myers, former HM inspector of Constabulary, 65; David Park, author, 43;

Brian Patten, poet, 50; Dave Shepherd, jazz clarinetist, 67.

TEASE, a humanist, a | The Punitive Obsession are still well-regarded in the these were chief asfield

As a social being, Giles had two principal modes. One was teasing dry references to others' past fumbles and digs at foibles, running gags. None of these can really be cuts. Whenever we parted, we always said "Cheery-bye" to each other, having adopted it from a particularly twerpy character in Evelyn Waugh. were his way of expressing affection without syrup.

gence. Possibly his powers of intellectual dissection, of co-gent response, had been shar-pened by his legal training; in any case he had an awe-some, quiet ability to get to the intellectual heart of

by his father's example and Giles was his father's son to the end of his own life - he say his experiences with the Ma-layan Broadcasting Corpora-tion, curtailed in 1942 by the Japanese army's arrival, and his first book, written when he was 26, My Father's Son, which was his autobiographi-cal approach to writing about his lets father the dictinwas impatient with the taw-dry. He knew that, in a world where sleaze was metamorphosing into an ethos, he was becoming old-fashioned, but he didn't feel heroic about it. He simply existed in his nature.

The last 20 years of his life were a chronicle of slow. physical decline. He suffered several strokes. The one a man who spoke the most beautiful English I have ever his obituary, a line from Bernard Shaw, whom we both revered. Here is what Shaw said about William Morris: You can lose a man like that by your own death, but not by his."

Stanley Kauffman

who became the mother of Piers and Sanchia At about this time he embarked on what was probably his major work, a series of five books on penology and born September 27, 1910; died January 17, 1996

Death Notices

Anniversaries

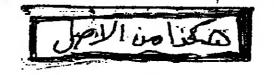

Would you like to get hold of the paper you're holding more easily?

Six days a week, the Guardian International consistently delivers the latest news to an international readership. In many countries we've gone further by introducing a subscription service, in order to make its unparalleled UK. European and world news more readily available.

We're planning to extend this service to more countries over the coming months. So, if you'd like to know whether there is a subscription available or when we're starting a subscription service in your area that would get the Guardian International into your hands more quickly and cheaply, just get hold of a pen and write to the address below.

The Guardian International, Subscription Dept, 75 Farringdon Road, London EC1M 3LX, England

The Guardian

cedric out as dispute flares

pank bangs th

Rank bangs the gong in Osaka, page 12

Financial Editor: Alex Brummer Telephone: 0171-239-9610 Fax: 0171-833-4456

Finance Guardian

Cedric bows out as oil dispute flares retiring chief executive Cedric Brown (front) and chairman Giordano ponder a Gas split fails to quell row

Chris Barrie and معاديا والمحجور مرخخ

1 15 E

40.00

 $\leq L^{\alpha_{1},\alpha_{2}}$

 $\omega_{\rm B} = 0.5$

IL producers last night dashed Britsh Gas's hopes that its radical demerger could live a costly row with the oil industry over £40 billion of gas contracts by declaring they were in no mood to back down and help bail out the privatised group.

The plans to split the company into two independent nies were adopted after Brit-ish Gas directors decided to give up their fight to keep the company a single entity — a battle which has been waged relentlessly since it was pri-vatised in 1986. Under the plans, the company's 218 billion pipelines business will be put into a new company called TransCo International alongside BG's exploration and production

Separately, the group's trading arm will be put into a new company called British Gas Energy along with the group's disputed take-or-pay contracts and its North and South Morecambe Bay gas field interests. These have reserves totalling 4.5 trillion cubic feet — capable of meeting 15 per cent of the UK mar-ket's gas needs. Presenting the plans — to have the two new businesses in operation from spring, 1997 and to seek a stock market quotation for both — chair-man Richard Giordano said there was unlikely to be an early resolution to the row over costly gas contracts. "We could see the same situation this time next year."

Gas still had an obligation to supply the whole market. But would be easier to scrutmise the rapid introduction of com- | the two sides of the company.

petition in the industrial mar-ket, the advent of domestic competition starting in April competition starting in April and a simultaneous collapse in spot prices for gas have left it saddled with an excess of high-priced gas.

Energy Minister, Tim Eggar, said last night that he expected the two sides to find a way out of what he called a "very soluble problem".

But, in an indication of the But, in an indication of the battle ahead, one North Sea operator said that it would scrutinise BG's flotation plans to ensure that they met A spokesman said: "BG must convince the Stock Exthe wherewithal to float. They cannot just float the company let it drift and go bust." He added that the industry expected the Stock Exchange to "ask hard questions" of BG.

allowed to collapse under the weight of the contracts, both Energy and TransCo Interna tional would be "knee-deep in lawyers".

The offshore industry will also be watching for signs that British Gas will rein in production at its Morecambe Bay fields. One executive said output from BG's fields was running at high levels, and that BG was paying "top dollar" for the gas.

Another producer said that
BG was trying to overestimate the scale of the problem with its take-or-pay contracts. prices, the export of gas through the inter-connector pipeline to the Continent, and sales to gas-fired power stations could turn these liabilities into assets, he said. The change in strategy at British Gas was welcomed by The contracts were signed British Gas was welcomed by in the late 1980s when British the industry regulator, Clare

Unquiet American companies as a non-executive director, highly geared performance packages for executives have tended to follow. There is even a in career trough of own making

Profile

T HAD become acce wisdom in the City that Cedric Brown would have to be sacrificed somer or later but big shareholders were beginning to suggest The company added that if British Gas Energy was allowed to collars a way and the state of the condition of BG.

The company added that if the condition of BG.

The company added that if the condition of BG.

The company added that if the condition of BG.

The company added that if the condition of BG.

The company added that if the condition of BG.

The company added that if the condition of BG.

The company added that if the condition of BG.

The company added that if the condition of BG.

The company added that if the condition of BG.

The company added that if the condition of BG.

The company added that if the condition of BG. vigour into the group.
"People are asking whether it is possible that [he] simply can't cope with this one," said one fund manager. Giordano joined British Gas as a non-executive director two years ago and was almost immediately in-stalled as chairman following the coup to oust

Robert Evans. His reputation as a mover and shaker in British business was carved during a long stint at the gases group, BoC. Giordano arrived in the top job after Airco, a US commercial gas company he headed, was acquired by BoC in a bruising takeover battle in 1978 ing takeover battle in 1978. Far from being ousted by the acquiring group, the youthful American was invited on to the board of the victor where he almost im-strong following in UK business. Gushing profiles over the years, in news-papers as serious as the Fi-terms of his Hollywood good looks, honeyed voice and piercing intellect. He is the youngest son of New York Italian immigrants whose ambition ook him to Harvard and then Columbia law school and a brief stint with the Wall Street law firm,

Shearman & Sterling, be-ously described him in fore he leapt into business. Despite a growing following for the BOC share performance, suspicion of Giordano remained during his tenure at the group, fuelled by his appetite for big pay packets. He was Brit-ain's first £1 million a year manager and made frequent appearances on the pages of the tabloids. Just three years into his tenure at BOC the Economist was pondering how Giordano could draw one of the highest salaries in big business when the return on shareholders' capital had risen by just 5 per cent, among the lowest achieved by any large company. He ruffled feathers by insisting his salary at BOC — and about half his current remuneration — should be paid in dollars and linked to US inflation. And, when phrase for it in the City the Giordano Effect.

Giordano himself — now divorced with three grownup children — will proba-bly collect about £7 million from share options when he finally quits BOC.

It is a controversial and brazenly American approach to remuneration. The man with upmarket the Atlantic, with a taste for yachting and Rolls-Royces makes few concessions to the traditional British distaste for flamboyant wealth.

But controversy erupted installed a new remuneration scheme at British Gas.

Cedric Brown's large pay and pension increase was the focus of shareholder and public unrest. Giordano outraged even his business peers by claiming a salary of £450,000 a year mediately took charge.

Giordano has appeared in for what was nominally a baving failed a the boardrooms of other part-time non-executive job of his life?"

chairmanship.
Those misgivings gained strength as British Gas stumbled from one public relations shambles to ancustomer base, abandoned its charter mark and fell foul of competition arguments with its regulator. One observer with intimate knowledge of the group accused Glordano of "serious errors of judg-ment" and said: "He has brought big industry tech-niques to what is a service caused great public offence. It is something that a person from a service indi background wouldn't have done and is certainly something that someone from a British service industry eckground wouldn't have One fund manager commented: " He can be criticised either for failing to realise the importance of the fixed-price contracts or, even worse, regarding these as an issue not worth explaining to shareholders two years ago."

Mistakes had been made at BOC too but shares steadily outperformed the market and Giordano's reputation remained intact. With four years still to go before official retirement age, he will be hoping that the past two years of almost incessant trouble at British buried by the breathtaking demerger.

The plan could not have come a moment laterfor a man increasingly under fire. As one leading City banker put it: "There is a big danger for Giordano . . . He made a big pile of money out of BOC, but the question now is will he retire baving failed at the biggest

Much action, but little movement

Edited by Mark Milner

FALLING share price, rising numbers of complaints, public opprobrium over boardroom pay and a looming crisis over take-or-pay contracts has put enormous pressure on British Gas. Yesterday it responded with a quit-and-split strategy, which will see the company divided into two and the departure of chief executive Cedric Brown.

That might seem pretty radical. The reality, however, is that the changes, in them-selves, will solve absolutely nothing. Consider the problem of the take-or-pay contracts. The contracts remain. The prob-lem has simply been shuffled off into a separate vehicle from the profitable bulk of the business. The departure of the much-vilified Mr Brown, with a modest — by British Gas standards -- consultancy and a handsome pension will not end spell the end of the era of fat cats. There will always be those who will want to pay themselves more than they deserve or even some problematical "going rate". The efforts of the Cadbury and Greenbury committee are probably more likely to bear fruit here than any kind of "to encourage the others" example which might be read into Mr Brown's departure. Even their impact be be limited. Depressingly, there are already reports that Britain's corporate aristocracy is auffering from "governance about the demerger decision is that it will enable British management resources more clearly on coping with liabilities of up to £1.5 billion, stemming from the take-or-pay contracts, without having to worry about the knock-on effects on the TransCo

It will also allow the management of TransCo to concentrate on the forthcoming challenge presented by the opening of the domestic gas vears' time, without being diverted by the possible finan-cial demands of the take-or-pay problem.

Unfortunately the British

Gas management record hardly inspires confidence Long-suffering shareholders who have seen the value of their investments slump by more than £1 to around £2.40 do better to pin their hopes on a string of hard winters! be his. Mr Riverso also wants to be The Government must be feeling a touch uncomfortable at the recent turn of events at gotiating with another air-British Gas, too. Though it is line. Judging by the experi-a decade since it privatised ence of the Spanish the company, it has supported the latter's desire (held until very recently) to remain a his way to the European Com-single entity and the de-mission headquarters in merger represents another Brussels. Now that's one

Add to this the running sore of nuclear privatisation the rapidly changing owner-ship structure of the electric-ity supply industry and the crossed fingers at the National Grid during the last cold snap, and the Govern-ment's policy for energy hardly looks coherent. Don't you just love being in control.

Costly errors

OU have to wonder how all those highly paid City analysts justify their salaries. For months, it has been blindingly clear that any manufacturer selling top of the market consumer goods has been hit by the retail downturn. The squeeze on sales of luxury items, such as premium spirits, has been particularly severe right across Europe.

The outlook is so depressed that companies such as Guinness, Moet Hennessy and Remy Cointreau have already spelled out the gloom in a series of public statements. For all that, the City ap-peared to have been taken completely by surprise when Allied-Domecq yesterday sounded out a similar warn-ing. Within minutes, the news had wiped more than £145 million off the share price. By the end of trading the share price had recovered some-what, but was still 8p off at 506p. The shake-up highlights how easily the City can be wrong-footed by an announce-ment which might have been anticipated by anybody with

And it underlines yet again the need for a complete re-think on the way companies divulge price sensitive information. Expensive and time consuming as it might be, there is a case for companies such as Allied-Domecq being Obliced to make quarterly trading statements rather than saving it up for a bomb-shell at the annual meeting. Clearly, companies can no longer rely on the trends being picked up by highly

The market mayhem stemming from the release of surtion benefits nobody save speculative traders.

Aerial combat

ANAGEMENT and unions at Italy's state-owned flag carrier Ali-talia are on a collision course over plans to plug years of losses. Chairman Roberto Riverso wants increased productivity and job cuts. The unions, whose members have taken industrial action in promore than £1 to around £2.40 test at Mr Riverso's strategy, over the past two years might think the first job to go should allowed to raise fresh capital but denies that Alitalia is nelossmaking airline, Iberia, Mr Riverso could yet be making departure from its original vi- | flight which won't be delayed.

Living in hope of stability

WORKFACE/Technician tells of industry in state of flux. Martyn Halsall reports

OB MATTHEWS, a gas man for 25 years, has spent much of his Cultural change within the career in accelerating change. As a governor technician, usually covering hundreds of lowering of the average age of miles a week across one of the the workforce, nearer to the 32 districts now operated by Transco, and a senior union official, he was looking forward to negotiating for stability. Until yesterday. My major hope for the future is that we get some state of stability," said the 42-year-old father of two. But he sighed: "At the moment we are in a state of flux." He was also the first to admit "It's not going to settle down yet." But when settle-ment comes he hopes it will bring something rarely found company since privatisation, he pointed out, had included a mid-30s. But this process had also raised long-term anxi-eties about job stability and recruitment

When Mr Matthews entered

the pre-privatised industry, British Gas was recruiting apprentices for four years of training. In 1983, said his union, the GMB, the company was taking on 1,000 schoolleavers a year; today all such recruitment has ended. During that same period, since privatisation, the total workforce has fallen from 97,200 to in his industry in recent 50,000. TOURIST RATES - BANK SELLS Australia 1.9750 France 7.50 Italy 2,365 Singapore 2.13

Australia 15,30 Germany 2,2000 Maits 0.5425 South Africa 5.42
Belgium 45,00 Greece 370,00 Hong Kong 11,68 New Zealand 2,23 Sweden 10,53 Switzerland 1,78 Cyprus 0,7050 India 58.08 Ireland 0,9550 Finland 6.88 Israel 4,79 Saudi Arabia 5.70 USA 1,5000 "There's no compulsory redundancy in British Gas at the moment but there's a voluntary package that some people have found attractive," he said.

This meant that the GMB felt it would not have been right to encourage younger people into an industry when people with long-term employment records were going out of the door and we are not exactly sure what levels of manpower we are going to require in the future", he

"People were already concerned about the future of the company and this [announce-ment] has opened another door. They will be worried until some of the questions are answered." be said. One serious concern, after yesterday's news of the company's reorganisation, is the potential impact on pensions. Details sought will embrace any possible reorganisation schemes, for industrial employees and for staff. "A lot of the employe now shareholders in British Gas and obviously they want to know what is going to happen with that."

of the previous two pension

OUTLOOK/Split will make problems easier to manage, writes Simon Beavis released a little pressure from a crisis which was ballooning so alarmingly that it threatened the very survival of the privatised group.

Investors, the regulator, consumer watchdogs, staff, customers and the Government saw a board, beaded by Richard Giordano, which appeared to be sitting on its hands contemplating the chaos. They were all, in different ways, calling for action. The action came yesterday with the decision to cleave the company in two and to send Cedric Brown into ignominious but lucrative exile. When British Gas becomes two companies Transco International will comprise its lucrative pipeline business and exploration and production interests, while British Gas Energy will house the gas supply business, the company's Morecambe Bay gas fields and £40 billion of con-

RITISH Gas's surprise troversial take-or-pay condemerger announce-tracts for overpriced gas the company can no longer sell. But what has changed? The 2p fall in the share price to 242.5p shows that the City thought very little.

The reality is that Mr Giordano's grand plan does not solve any of BG's problems, it only makes them a little easier to manage — a fact he was candid enough to admit. At the heart of British Gas's problems are the gas con-tracts, signed in the late 1980s when BG was still a mighty monopoly with an obligation to supply the whole market. Since then, competition deliberately drummed into the market by the Government and successive regulators - has made vast inroads into the industrial market. Between April this year and 1998 competitors are being allowed a run at the domestic market. All this has left BG at with too much gas, at too high

ing to renegotiate the con- business (assets worth £18 BG is that the producers will tracts with the big oil and gas | billion) has been severed. companies having failed to convince the Government that consumers should pick up at least part of the tab. While the contracts were tied to the entire British Gas group, the big producers felt able to hold out for a good deal. After the demerger, the link between the contracts

How twin burners will reduce the heat and the lucrative pipelines British Gas Energy TransCo International

Service and retall business Accord energy contract limbilities

dealing with BG Energy Ltd. a company with assets of just £2.6 billion, more than £2 billion of which probably relates to the Morecambe fields, and now liabilities estimated loosely at over £1.5

Exploration and Power generation, global and other group business production business

This is not a financially robust company. The hope in

The big split The proposed demerger would create two independent companies

Supply business Pipeline business

Morecambe Bay gas fields Long term gas

Staff: 22,000

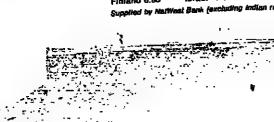

change their tune, once they realise that without a deal the new company will founder and they may get nothing. It was a clever wheeze to throw in the Morecambe Bay assets without putting a value on them. The alternative — a cash injection - would have placed a more precise value on the liabilities. Transco International looks like a steady earner built around the natural monopoly of the national pipeline system provided it gets through a forthcoming regulatory price review without going to the MMC. Both companies will be quoted if all goes to plan. Both could eventually be takeover

The big question is why BG has suddenly been converted to the idea of demerger. Since before privatisation in 1986 it has argued that it should be kept intact. In 1993 the MMC called for its break-up but the Government backed the company. Since arriving in 1994 and until now, Mr Giordano has shown little enthusiasm to change the line. Hardly deft footwork by a well-paid

Paper chase. . . Chairman Ramsay Hampton and chief executive Alan McKendrick of Aylesford Newsprint rummage among 500 tons of used paper, 'our urban forest', at Europe's biggest hi-tech recycling mill in Kent, which takes in 9,000 tons of used newsprint a week

SIB investigates copper price-rigging

HE SECURITIES and City's premier watchfull-scale inquiry into copper dealings in London, in the wake of allegations that the price of the metal is being ma-

Direct intervention by the SIB is highly unusual, since under normal circumstances the watchdog subcontracts its powers of investigation and regulation to one of the City's self-regulatory organisations comes amid mounting specu-

— In the case of the copper market, the Securities and Futures Association and the London Metal Exchange, Its action indicates that either the SIB believes the market's usual regulators are incompetent or that the SFA and/or the LME require fur-ther powers to conduct their

Such powers include the threat of up to six months in prison for market participants who fail to produce information or documents de-

Neither the SIB nor the

the spot price of copper (for immediate delivery), beyond the three-month future price, triggering an artificial surge

The head of one leading metals broker confirmed that tailed examination of recent copper trades, but he believes the LME found no evidence of price manipulation. Inquiries have also been conducted by the US market watchdog, the Commission in Washington, acting on complaints by US firms who trade in London. fair, where the Chilean group lost more than £130 million in speculative copper trading. In the summer of 1993 an investigation into manipulanation of £100,000 to the

A row over another series of trades between several

Several brokers are thought to have been contacted by the SIB. Its probe into price manipulation comes after a hiphly profitable trading to have cost the Chinese more to have cost the Chinese more acceptable to have cost the Chinese more to have cost the Chinese more to have cost the Chinese more commodities, the highly profitable trading group built up by Charles than $500 million (£326.7 million) — has also continued to fester.

The only precedent for the SFA whether an inquiry into his firm begun in the spring of 1994 will lead to discipling the recent codel of the profitable trading group built up by Charles the continued to fester.

SIB's action in the copper market is an investigation ities market five years ago, when evidence emerged that reported trades in a new investment instrument, prop respected members, Credit erty futures, were falsified to Lyonnais Rouse, making a do make the instrument look nation of £190,000 to the more popular than it actually ary action over Winchester's dealings with the Chilean copper corporation, Codelco. The SFA's decision forms part of a compromise reached between the regulator and the broker after Winches plied last week for a fudicial review of the SFA's actions arguing that its on-going and seemingly open-ended inves-tigation might damage Win-

Gold panic after 'rogue broker' claim

Dan Atkinson and trading. So, in order to show these rumours are un-Jan Rocha in Sao Paulo find fears of Leeson-style trading in US

HAOS threatened world gold markets last night after Brazil's central bank accused a rogue Wall Street bullion broker of

The bank appears to be suggesting that the 2,000-tonne wild gold-trading gamble, rumoured to be the work of a Latin American serve bank, is heading r a Barings-style

If the allegations by Joubert Furtado, head of Banco Central do Brasil's internain world bullion trading agents, of "using the name of the central bank to manipulate the market and to speculative

His comments came after the authorities in Brasilia announced on Monday that they were suspending all official gold dealings for days, and possibly weeks, to kill runours, circulating since Christmas, that Banco Central was sitting on a potentially-ruinous "short" position in the gold

"If we really have been caught short by 2,000 tonnes, fren the one thing true, that is exactly what we have done," said Mr Furtado "I think we will stop operations for days at least, probably weeks."

Mr Furtado told the Brazilian media he was asking the US regulator, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, to try to iden-tify which of the 12 Wall Street brokers regularly employed by Banco Central had been illegally using the bank's name. His suggestions implied Banco Central may be a flag of convenience" used to hide either a broker's own position in the market a troy ounce on Monday's said the bullion price was not likely to suffer a significant fall, despite this drop. The price has risen from some $340-an-ounce before Christmas.

Until now, City gold trad-ers have treated with some a Latin "Nick Leeson" running riot on bullion markets, although the mood in New York is much more of the Brazilian bulliondealing suspension: "That's just extraordinary". And of Mr Furtado's comments in general, he added "central bankers don't talk this vay". Brazilia has flatly denied normal positions or that its trades have been outside of risk. It will seek compensation from whichever in-

News in brief

Lloyd's heads for three-year profits

LLOYD'S of London, which announces its results three years in arrears, is on target to unveil profits for the years 1983, 1994 and 1985 after a string of record losses, according to market adviser indemnity insurance Services. IIS forecasts a profit of £971 nounced this spring and would be the market's first since 1987, £1 billion for 1994 and £835 million for 1996.

IIS said in a statement that its estimates do not take into account any expenses incurred by the Names — the market's backers - and any potential special levy that may be called by Lloyd's to bolster its central guarantee fund. IIS is adviser to Euclidian, a Lloyd's investment company, and to stop loss

GMTV turns the corner

GMTV, the ITV breakfast station, announced its first profits yesterday after three years of losses. Managing director Christo-pher Steddart said the £1 million operating profit was achieved with the help of £4 million from the Channel 4 funding formula. GMTV, in which the Guardian Media Group has a 15 per cent stake, had to pay 238 million to the Treasury. Advertising revenue increased by 8 per cent to 280 million in 1985. Mr Stoddart said: "The narrowness of the profit margin shows the importance to GMTV of the Channel 4 transfer. Any reduction would tend to be at the expense of programme expenditure." GMTV insisted the formula was an integral part of the licence hidding arrangements in 1991. — Andrew Cui nel tunnel operator, said its passenger car traffic more than doubled in Lanuary, compared with a year ago. Eurotunnel's Le Shuttle transit service handled 96,971 cars last month, against 45 (52 in 1905, according to figure, issued in Paris yesterday. A total of 1,222 (44 passenger cars used the service last year. Eurotumel soid in a statement. "Despite the strong seasonal fall in traffic in the month of January. Eurotumel recorded a very good level of four ist traffle in the first month of 1996, with nearly 100 (60 or hades transported, of which 96,971 were cars." It aims to increase furnaver in 1906 by more than 50 per cent. - Reuter

Car traffic boosts tunnel

EUROTUNNEL, the financially beleasuered Anglo-French Chan-

Chambers appointment

IAN PETERS is to become deputy director-general of the British Chambers of Commerce, the 200,000-strong smaller firms' body, it was announced last right. Or Peters was formerly responsible for policy on small and medium sized firms at the Confederation of British industry. The CBI has recently revamped its services to smaller companies in an effort to lose its image as the voice of big business and Dr Peters' appointment is seen as heralding stron-ger links between the two organisations — and perhaps bringing closer a merger. — Celta Weston

Sabena hit by strike

PASSENGERS at Brussels autport faced renewed chaos yesterday after staff at Belgian national airline Sabena held a one-day strike, shutting down the carrier's flights to and from the capital. Other airlines were able to operate flights, although baggage handling was delayed. Sabena has already suffered a number of one-day strikes over management plans to freeze wages, raise working bours and bring in more staff flexibility. The airline says the steps are necessary to spur growth and create jobs. - Reuter

Cancer drugs firm sold

MEDEVA, the UK's fourth-biggest drugmaker, has sold its German subsidiary Ribosepharm to the German group Klinge Pharma for £53.8 million as part of its plan to end its involvement in cancer treatment. Medeva purchased Ribosepharm in May 1993 to complement its own range of respiratory and hyperactivity treatments. Ribosepharm markets a range of branded oncology products in Germany, but Medeva said it has found it difficult to exploit them through its international operations. - Tony May

BA chief attacks managers

BRITISH Airways was criticised by its own chief executive, Bob Aylang, yesterday for still bearing too many attributes of a nationalised industry nine years after provisation. Mr Ayling, who took over running the company last month and has already reduced the number of senior managers from 25 to 11, said that some managers were doing very little work. Mr Ayling told a meeting of shareholders and key staff that there was a need for "slimmer, sharper management". — Keith Harper as rescue fails

second bi t coal mining group, called in administrators yesterday.

The group, headed by for-mer British Coal commercial director Malcolm Edwards, made the move after an at-tempt to cobble together a bankers' rescue package

The bankers, led by NatWest and including Union Bank of Switzerland and Banque indosuez, disagreed over the terms of the 28 million package, which was requested after CI used up its existing 230 million borrowing facility. CI has been suffering for some time from severe cash flow problems, which came to a head in December, when the group's shares were suspended at 25p. Later that month, the group's miners volunteered to cut short their Christmas holidays to dig more coal and gen-erate extra cash for the group, although that effort now looks to have been in vain. However, Murdoch McKillop, a nurtner at administra-tors Arthur Andersen, in-sisted last night that CI would continue to trade for the time caused si being, and stressed that it was ton Hall, not in receivership. He added: building.

"We are reviewing all the op-tions open to us. It is too early what strategy we wil P TO 1.500 jobs are under threat after Coal Investments, Britain's we hope we will be able to find way forward."

Meanwhile, the power gen-erator National Power disclosed that it had been ap-proached as part of a possible rescue deal. It is also thought that CTs stakes in Mining Scotland — which owns sev-eral of British Coal's old Scot-tish pits — will be sold as part of any future financial restructuring.

CI, which owns pits in the Midlands, Wales and Yorkshire, was backed by the breakaway miners' union, the UDM. The company was formed from redundant collieries such as Markham Main and Silverdale, which remained after British Coal sold its more lucrative mines to Britain's biggest private miner. RJB Mining. CI, which was floated in 1983, suffered a crucial set-back in December, when it failed to win planning permission for a new, low-cost coal face at Barlaston. face at Staffordshire

Approval was blocked when it was disclosed that previous operations by British Coal in the area had caused subsidence at Barlas-ton Hall, a Grade One listed

Rank joins with MCA for very big Japanese theme park adventure

Kevin Rafferty in Tokyo

BRITAIN'S Rank Organi-sation is to team up with Japan's electronics group. Matsusbita, the Hollywood film-maker. MCA, and the city of Osaka in a billion pound venture to bring Japanese filmgoers face to face with Hollywood's heroes and villains. The Universal Studios Japan film theme park is scheduled to open in 2001 in the country's second city. The deal was signed yesterday after years of negotiations. Rank will have a 17 per cent stake, the same as MCA, with the rest being held by the city of Osaka and local business. The organisers are hop-ing to cash in on Japan's entertainment boom which has seen more than 150 million people visiting Tokyo's Disneyland since it opened in 1983. Ron Meyer, the president of MCA, de-scribed the venture as "an

The park's promoters expect to attract more than eight million visitors a year, bringing in revenues of 50 billion yen that will soon make the 160 billion yen fixed networks for business and private customers, profitable.

It is the first time that MCA has taken the film theme outside its US base. where it has parks in Holly-wood and Florida. Some film executives predict that if the park is successful, then it may also function as a film studio.

The promoters think that the park will attract visitors not just from Japan but from all over Asia. It will be linked to the newly opened Kansai International Airport by a highspeed water taxi.

For Osaka, the Jurassic Park dinosaurs are not just idle entertainment, but are also part of a plan to make the area a magnet for multimedia technology-and hi-tech information busi-nesses. Its Technoport important adventure. The Osaka Project has just Japanese consumer has a started nearby. Japan's wonderful appreciation for second city is also ambi-American film, television tious to stage the 2008 fair prices for network Olympic Games.

Mines group calls US tobacco 'intimidation' inquiry

ROSECUTORS have begun an investigation into whether Brown & Williamson, the American subsidiary of BAT, tried to intimidate a former company official turned star witness in the tobacco industry.

A grand jury in Washing a subpoens to John Scanion, a publicist who has played a eading role in efforts to discredit Jeffrey Wigand, a for-mer B&W research executive. Mr Wigand, who has emerged as one of the most po-tentially damaging witnesses against cigarette makers, ap-peared on the CBS programme 80 Minutes on Sunday and tive effects of nicotine.

Mr Scanlon, a permer at the New York public relations firm of Abernathy MacGregor: Scanlon, declined to confirm a Wall Street Journal report of the subpoena but said: by the Justice Department, I will co-operate fully."

role was to help identify reporters who were willing to listen to the other side of the story."

Meanwhile, Mr Wigand has filed a lawsuit against B&W, accusing his former employer of invading his privacy by compiling and distributing reports on his past. According to his lawyer, Frank Doheny.

Mr Wigand included going through his credit card bills and interviewing relatives from a previous marriage.

sified his CV. Mr Wigand' lawsuit seeks unspecified damages from B&W for sub-

This advertisement is issued in accordance with the listing rules of the London Stock Exchange Limited. Application has been made for the undermentioned C Shares and

C Warrants to be admitted to the Official List. It is expected that dealings in units

(each comprising five C Shares and one C Warrant) will commence on Friday, 8th

March, 1996. Application will be made to the London Stock Exchange Limited for the New Ordinary Shares and New Ordinary Warrants arising on conversion to be admitted to the Official List. It is expected that dealings in the New Ordinary Shares and New Ordinary Warrants separately will commence on Monday, 29th April, 1996.

accused former B&W chair- | B&W's campaign to discredit | less," has its own lawsuit man Thomas Sandefur of Mr Wigand included going | against Mr Wigand for allegagainst Mr Wigand for alleg-edly violating a confidential

"That's an invasion of pri-for B&W, several current and eacy and something no one former amployees, including should be subject to simply for two former vice-presidents, testifying about the effects of tobacco or nicotine," Mr Do-seeled government documents heny said

B&W said that Mr Wigand

was once arrested for shoplift. The alleged scam involved ing, abused his ex-wife and fallshipping back into Canada and exported. The aim was to circumvent Canada's heavy jecting him to "cruel and unjust hardship". Mr Wigand also said that he began carrying a gun after receiving threatening phone calls against his children.

B&W, which dismissed Mr Wigand's claims as "meritiaged by a federal grand jury may further tarnish B&W's reputation.

BT finds new ally to attack Deutsche 'monopoly'

Julie Wolf in Brussels

BRITISH Telecom last night launched a two-pronged attack on Deutsche Telekomm, its German rival, as it upped the stakes in the battle for the lucrative European market. BT teamed up with RWE, a leading German utility, and its existing partner, Viag. to merge their telecommunications networks in Germany in a joint onslaught against Deutsche Telekomm's virtual monopoly in Europe's biggest

It also threatened court action if the European Com-mission fails to impose stricter conditions on the con-troversial Atlas joint venture between France Telecom and Deutsche Telekomm ness and private customers, Essen-based RWE said in a statement released after stock markets closed in Germany and the UK. Later the compa-nies will consider satellite and mobile services. Viag and BT formed a joint venture in Germany last January. They said they would each own 37.5 per cent. Earlier, Larry Stone, head of regulatory affairs for BT, said the agreement reached last year between the commission, the French and German governments and their telecoms monopolies failed to safeguard competition in the two countries sufficiently. BT is concerned that many of the conditions attached to the deal only apply until 1998, when Europe's telecoms mar-kets are due to be fully liberalised. But BT is not con-vinced there will immediately be effective competition in France and Germany and wants stronger guarantees on

SCHRODER UK GROWTH

FUND ple

(Incorporated in England and Wales under the Companies Act 1985 with registered number 2894077)

Offer for Subscription Sponsored by de Zoete & Bevan Limited

of up to 400,000,000 C Shares of 50p each (with C Warrants attached on a one for five basis) at an issue price of 50p per share payable in full on application.

Copies of the Prospectus dated 6th February, 1996 can be obtained, by collection only, during normal office hours for two business days from and including 7th February, 1996 from the Company Announcements Office, the London Stock Exchange Tower, Capel Court entrance off Bartholomew Lane, London EC2. In addition, copies of the Prospectus are available for collection during normal business hours (9.30am - 5pm Monday to Friday) up to and including 1st March, 1996 from any of the following:

Schroder Investment Management Limited Senator House 85 Queen Victoria Street London EC4V 4EJ

> Bank of Scotland New Issues Apex House 9 Haddington Place Edinburgh EH74AL

Ebbgate House 2 Swan Lane London EC4R 3TS

Bank of Scotland New Issues First Floor Broad Street House 55 Old Broad Street London EC2P 2HL

de Zoete & Bevan Limited

7th February, 1996

Workers F

as car ind

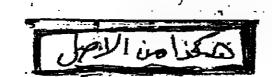

ELS NOTHER TOWN The state of the s San Land & Park Blood State of the state A STATE OF THE PARTY OF THE PAR

Andrew Control

THE PROPERTY OF THE PARTY OF TH

44.4

Factory output fall paints gloomiest picture since 1992

HE Government admitted yesterday that growth in Britain's manufacturing sector had come to a complete stand-still, after publishing figures showing a sharp fall in fac-tory output in December. Production by factories was down 0.7 per cent in December. The Central Statistical Office agreed that the trend in manufacturing output was now flat — the gloomiest esti-mate since December 1992 and a counterpoint to Chan-cellor Kenneth Clarke's up-beat predictions of 3 per cent growth overall this year.

Although economists said some of the downturn was caused by firms meeting demand from excessive stocks built up during the second half of last year, most said the unexpected scale of the downturn shortened the odds on further interest rate cuts.

Ian Shepherdson, UK econ-omist at HSBC Markets, said: "This is an appalling performance in manufacturing If these figures don't frighten the authorities, nothing will." City gloom was deepened y figures showing that the weakness in the manufacturing sector was not a one-off. Production levels between October and December were 0.2 in the month.

Overall the CSO's index of in 1996."

water also rose by 6.6 per cent we expect manufacturing output to grow by 2.5 per cent in 1996."

ous three months. Mr She-pherdson said that the Chan-cellor was now likely to cut and December industrial outthe cost of borrowing from the current level of 6.25 per cent before the spring.

But most city analysts said Mr Clarke was unlikely to act after today's monthly mone-tary meeting with the Gover-nor of the Bank of England, nor of the Bank of England.

Eddie George. He is expected to wait and see how much of the slowdown is being driven by de-stocking before cutting again. David Coleman, an econo-

David Coleman, an economist at the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, said the Treasury's forecast of 3 per cent GDP growth in 1996 was unlikely to be met without more reductions in base rates. "Without them, it is difficult to see where the recovery will come from."

recovery will come from."

The CSO said, however, that the unexpectedly sharp fall in factory output would not effect its preliminary estimate of 0.4 per cent GDP growth for the last three strong performance in other industrial sectors.

Between November and December oil and gas extraction jumped by 4 per cent, as de-mand surged during the pre-Christmas cold snap. The sup-ply of electricity, gas and put was unchanged on the preceding three months, and up by just 1.5 per cent on the same period in 1994. The manuf

The manufacturing element, which makes up 80 per cent of the overall index, was just 0.4 per cent higher in the last quarter of the year than in the same period a year before.

Labour seized on the CSO

Labour setzed on the CSO data to attack the Govern-mant's record of economic management. Shadow Trade and Industry Secretary, Margaret Beckett, said: "These figures show that the economy is not safe in the Conservatives, brade and conservatives." vatives' hands, and expose the Tory claim to be making Britain the 'enterprise centre of Europe' to be a slogan with-

Treasury officials said that December's out-turn did not reflect general trends, and pointed to an encouraging 1.9 per cent rise in production of investment goods in the last three months of 1995 — compared to a 1.9 per cent quar-ter-on-quarter full in non-durable goods such as food, drink and clothing.

A spokesman said: "The fundamentals remain in place for healthy growth and

Alex Brummer in Jerusalem on Israel's new economic peace dividend

US Secretary of State Warren Christopher honours American Varian Fry, who saved thousands of Jews from the Nazis, by planting a tree at the Yad Vashem Holocaust Memorial. All over Israel people were planting trees to mark the spring

Sell-off targets bankable asset

As more liberal, open economic system, the Israeli government has embarked on ambitious privatisation.

The process has been beset by difficulties. El Al, one of the more profitable global carriers, for instance, has long been seen as a candi-date but has remained in the public sector because of con-cerns that it might be tempted to fly on the Jewish Sabbath — forbidden by rabbinical law. But there has been gress. Companies put into the private sector include the Shekem Department stores group, Fertilizers & Chemicals Ltd and a control-ling stake in Bank Mizrachi has been sold also. Last year the government sold off the residential development concern, Housing & Devel-opment, as well as its controlling stake in Israel Chemicals.

In preparation for future privatisations there have been "structural reforms" in the telephone company, Bezeq, and in El Al. Overali some some $3.4 billion (£2.2 billion) has been raised through the sale of equity and debentures and in 1994 the government was able to fund some $740 million of borrowing through sell-offs of state assets.

One of the most important targets is Bank Hapoalim, which has been required to hive off its industrial shares in preparation for the selloff but the controversy has not ended there. The of Israel has expressed con-cerns about efforts by two separate consortia to buy a strategic 20 per cent stake in Bank Hapcalim as it prepares for a public sale.

vestment bank, Bear Stearns, which could be come a powerful financial force in Israel if its bid succeeds. The rival group in-

Workers pay the price as car industry stalls

The lay-off of 2,200 at Jaguar and static sales elsewhere have meant a gloomy start to the year. Chris Barrie reports

cial figures showed that car sales hardly rose last month and Jaguar temporarily laid off 2,200 workers because of 191,761 cars, a 0.3 per cent rise on the same month last year.

pour prospe aging start to the new year." He pointed out that January 1996 had also been a disappointment at 3.7 per cent below 1994's level.

The Retail Motor Industry The Retail Motor Industry and Astra.

Ford, the market leader with 21.82 per cent of the marbit pointing". Neil Marshall, lirector of public policy, said ales to private buyers had allen by 4 per cent.

Jaguar said its decision to and Astra.

Ford, the market leader with 21.82 per cent of the marbit per fixed the stage where the terms are not fair to the company's Halewood car plant is likely to have "the odd day" of layoffs, an improvement on the January to 22.120 vehicles. Federation described Janua ary's sales as "extremely disappointing". Neil Marshall, director of public policy, said sales to private buyers had fallen by 4 per cent.

plunged into despondency yesterday as offi-dency yesterday as offi-made in the wake of lowerthan-expected sales in the United States. Its UK sales were also down last month by 8 per cent at 1,065 registrations.

The lay-offs affect all three Jaguar West Midlands plants — Browns Lane and Radford, Traditionally a strong sales period, January's result left dealers and manufacturers and mean the loss of 4% days' Ernie Thompson, chief ex-ecutive of the Society of plans for job cuts. Workers shut-downs of the last two months which have cost sev-eral thousand cars. Ford said that its Southampton factory, which makes Transit vans would continue to work a three-day week until the end of the month. Production at Dagenham is nearing normal levels of 1,100 cars a day after the disruption of the start-up of car production for Mazda.

Rover sales were slightly up at 20,778 vehicles. Vauxhall blamed industrial action for hampering sales of the Vectra and Astra.

January's poor sales brought a call from the National Franchised Dealers Association for car prices to be slashed. Alan Pulham, the association director, said manufacturers should cut wholesale prices, widen the profit margins of dealers from free to offer lower prices to Mr Pulham said prices in the US were already up to 50 per cant lower than in the UK, and the American industry was already responding to falling sales by contemplating even lower prices. In the UK the manufacturers effectively restricted lower prices to large fleet buyers. "It has now reached the stage where the terms are not fair to the con-sumer," be said.

Sowing the seed of growt

topher, took time out peace shuttle this week, to join 250,000 Israelis in planting seedlings to mark the new year for trees, the traditional ceremony heralding the spring and Israel's transformation from arid desert to a land lush with orange groves and almond trees.

At this year's planting cere-monies Israeli and Palestinian children cultivated the trees together as "a true sym-

In many ways, however, the tree planting in the Israel of the mid-1990s is an anachro-nism. Although the delicate blossom of the almond trees is at its peak in the parks sur-rounding the Knesset and government buildings, the true symbols of the new Israel are the giant cranes over the Judean hills, and the relentless rhythms of the bulldozers clearing terraces in the rocks for new roads, housing and hi-tech industrial parks. Israel's soul may still be tormented by last year's ass-assination of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, but the nation's economic self-confidence and enormous energy remains unaffected. Strengthmed internationally by the recognition the peace process has brought, Israel is emerging as the "tiger" economy of the Middle-East.

The take-off of the economy, in particular the opening of trade relations with a host of countries including the new industrialised economies of the Far East, is largely attributed to the peace process.
"Because of political change,

HE US Secretary of loutside investment in Israel has picked up strongly," the Finance Minister Avraham Shochat said in an interview. "The risk factor of investing in Israel has come down."

Most of the benefit so far has come from the inward investment of multinational companies in Europe and Japan which were reluctant to do business with Israel, while it occupied Arab lands and when the most common images were clashes between the Israeli defence forces and Palestinian youths.

nity to take advantage of new trading relationships and to improve what Mr Shochat calls its "direct connections" with its neighbours, most no-tably Jordan, Egypt and the emerging Palestinian state. The loss of "pariah" status, and the absorption (with the aid of US loan guarantees) of up to half-a-million immigrants from the former Soviet Union, has contributed to a period of unprecedented growth for the Jewish state.

It has been better able to accommodate these changes because of a re-ordering of its own financial priorities. In keeping with global economic developments Israel has ex-tended its range of free trade agreements with the US, Can-ada and the European Union; brought down tariff levels; liberalised capital markets and moved to reduce subsi-dies and deregulate the economy. Much of this would have been anathema to previous Labour governments, which believed passionately in a more centralised, socialist

Last year growth in Israel surged to 6.9 per cent (the highest since 1972) with interest rates above 13 per cent as the Bank of Israel sought to bring inflation rates under control. The expansion has been fuelled by expanding manufacturing and business sectors. Last year there was a strong improvement in the housing market where investment exploded by 18.2 per cent; private consumption rose 7.1 per cent and exports of goods and services increased by 8.6 per cent. The increasingly prosper ous population — per capita income is now up to $15,500

(as high as Spain and Ireland) - also has put pressure on Israeli GDP, %

Economic rollercoaster

Growth at this pace has produced tensions. In a mirror image of the struggle in Britain between Chancellor Kenneth Clarke and the Governor of the Bank of England. Eddie George, Mr Shochat, a politician with forthcoming elections on his mind, has publicly clashed with the highly respected chairman of the Bank of Israel Jakob Frenkel. As a former chief economist at the International Monetary Fund, Mr Frenkel is determined to slay

Israel's inflation dragon. Although the country has come a long way from the mid-1980s (when annual inflation peaked at 440 per cent) it house prices: an ordinary was only in the last year that bit high," says the Finance Minister, with a clear degree of frustration at the actions of his colleague at the central rates by 0.3 per cent recently. We don't agree on this issue." Among the reasons he would like to see interest rates lower is that high real interest rates, in the region of 6 per cent, have, in his view, kept the Israeli currency, the shekel, artificially high, which has led to strong inflows of cash into the Israeli banking system and is damag export sector. Last year Israel's trade defi-

output of the economy, | central banker to ratchet up

cit (excluding military im-ports from the US) climbed to $10.5 billion. Although the current account shortfall was ment and other inflows.
"This is very high, I agree," says Mr Shochat. But he urges the international financial community to take into account other factors such as ing new immigrants: the fast pacing imports and the high value of the shekel, which he plainly hopes is temporary. Moreover, finance ministry officials point to the doubledigit expansion of exports to $27.5 billion in 1995 as a sign that the deficit is aberrational.

It must be the hope that as Israel's peace dividend, in the shape of new overseas mar-kets and inward investment. matures, the prospect for a better trade balance over the longer-haul also improves

Nokia Digital Security. Cellphones Direct Prices!

NOKIA GSM MODEL 2010.

- 99 name/number
- memory ◆ 100 mins talk-time 30 hrs standby-time Complete with standard battery and rapid travel
- charger ♦ Weight approx 320g

FREE HI-CAR ADAPTOR/CHARGER FREE SPARE BATTERY FREE LEATHER CASE TOGETHER WORTH OVER 575

world of difference to digital phone prices. With FREE connection to the Vodafone PersonalWorld Tariff, so you can use the phone throughout the UK, most of Europe and beyond on the GSM international network. With digital call clarity and absolute confidentiality.

Simply phone us with your credit card details to receive your phone plus valuable extras within 4 working days.

FREE

Ministry Reseal £17.63 (£15+VAT) Post Rate Calls | 42p per min (35p+VAT) ott Peak Calls | 18p per min (15p-)-YAT)

Proposition and force or 7.05-19.00 then to A. Herston, Yearney hillings of the charged of 5.1.77 or 90 per mode. Line work historical and country of other broad and the charge will be deleted to one country.

GUARANTEED PEACE OF MIND

ORDER NOW FOR FREE DELIVERY IN 4 WORKING DAYS

Offer subject to status and a structured withing contract for each places with Calphones Direct Ltd. 185 Lawer Reduces Full written details and terms and candidates of this offer are available on request. © Copyright.

Suitors 'uninterested' in Fokker shares

European Business Editor

SHAREHOLDERS in Fok-ker have little chance of salvaging any of their investment from the crisis at the Dutch aircraft manufacturer. it emerged yesterday.

The company, which claims it has a number of suitors including five with whom it is in serious discussion, said yesterday that none of the potential bidders had expres interest in a stock market

"Candidates have presented themselves for the takeover of all operations or for part of them." But the statement from the group added: "So far none of the candidates has an-shares or bonds of Fokker."

Analysts interpreted the situation. Fokker claims the situation. Fokker claims the bid for the bourse-listed | marketing venture Aero Intively worthless, as any pro-ceeds from the sale of assets would go to the company's creditors. There will be nothing left worried bondholders will lose their money," said Corne Zandbergen, head of research at Generale Bank Nederland. Fokker has repeatedly refused to name the compa nies which have expressed interest in all or part of the company. However the South Korean company Samsung has confirmed that it has held talks with Fokker, while Brit-

for shareholders and I'm also

AIR grouping has asked for detailed financial information. The Canadian group Bombardier has also said it is starting negotiations with Fokker while the US aircraft maker, McDonnell Douglas, is the latest to be said to have state with trade unions enjoy- tiously forecasting a further 5 overheating he uses his au-

ing extraordinary privileges. | per cent increase in the total | thority as an independent expressed interest.

Fokker was plunged into crisis last month when its controlling shareholder. Daimler-Benz, cut off further finance forcing the Dutch group to seek court protection from its creditors. Fokker is only being kept going by a £146 million support package from the Dutch government. none of the candidates has an ish Aerospace, alongside its. That is expected to run out nounced it is considering a partners in the regional jet around the end of the month.

Spirits sales slump leads to Allied Domecq profits warning

Patrick Donovan City Editor

three-bedroom apartment in | price increases dropped into central Jerusalem can now single figures to 8.1 per cent cost upwards of $500.000 to after hitting 14.5 per cent in buy. And the growth surge is not over. This year, according to Mr Shochat, Israel is caudownwards. At each sign of necq yesterday sent a shiver through the City as he warned that profits will be hit by an unexpected slump in

More than £145 million was wiped off the value of the company within minutes of him sounding the warning at yesterday's annual general meeting. But shares recov-ered in later trading and closed down 8p at 506p.

Mr Jackaman said that the downturn in spirit sales would see a 20 per cent fall in its forthcoming first-half | Cointreau.

profit figures. Analysts had been looking for profits of around £650 million.

The problem is most acute MICHAEL Jackaman, the in Europe as hard-pressed drinkers are increasingly opting for cheaper brands. But he added that US operations had also been hit by higher than expected stock levels and a disappointing Christmas sales season.

Mr Jackaman said second half profits would be boosted by the benefits of its long-running restructuring programme.

Allied is the latest drinks concern to issue profit warnings, following similar announcements by Guinne Moet Hennessy and Remy

Liverpool hit out at police ruling

lan Ross

took the highly un-usual step of criticisling a major police

Cup game at Shrewsbury.
The fourth-round tie was due to be played tonight but with the Gay Meadow pitch was postponed at lunchtime

Both clubs expected West usual 10-day ruling and sanc-tion its rearrangement for next Wednesday night. But, unforgivably from Liverpool's view, the sell-out game will now be played on Sunday week with an 11am kick-off.
They have shown a total disregard for our supporters." said Liverpool's chief Robinson added that he had not heard "one good reason" why the game needed such an early kick-off. "West Mercia police's decision may well have something to do with inthe postponement of tonight's fixture Shrewsbury had

Orient sack

ARRY HEARN, Leyton | laus if they wanted to rescue Orient's chairman, yes-

Stanislaus

Orient's chairman, yes-wider drug testing and for drug abusers after sacking Roger Stanislaus from the club.

Hearn said the FA were "lenient" last week when they sion on Stanislaus for taking cocaine before playing against Barnet in November.

The Orient board, meeting at Brisbane Road, decided 27-year-old defender's contract seven months after joining the London club from

Bury for £40,000. Hearn said: "The FA had very long ban. I felt Roger was lucky to escape with one under International Olympic Committee rules is two years.

doubt over every footballer

We need to be whiter than and that's unfair.

erday demanded much spokesman said: "The deci-sion was taken in the interests of safety. The ground is in the middle of Shrewsbury, which is a small town, with shoppers on Saturday after-noons. If we play early on Sunday morning we will, in the main, have only football supporters to deal with. "Other constabularies may be waiving the 10-day ruling, but we suspect those con-cerned will have more offihandle their matches."

ing complications for Leeds United and Birmingham City — together with a threat to live TV coverage of the second leg of their Coca-Cola Cup semi-final on Sunday, February 25.

West Yorkshire police wan the scheduled 4pm kick-off brought forward to 11.30am at Elland Road. Such a switch would force ITV to abandon live coverage because of their commitments to religious programming. Birmingham City last night

ure Shrewsbury had called for the second leg to be of to play host to Wrexing a League game on the week. "The only reason for image. Hearn introduced drug test and now intends writing to the FA, calling for more ex-tensive tests in football.

"I shall ask them to consider testing all 22 players involved in a match, plus substitutes — not just a couple at random," said Hearn, "I'd like to see the FA invest con-siderable sums as a deterrent playing the game on the Sun-day in the first place was so that it could be televised said their managing di rector Karren Brady.

pen - in which case we will lose £100,000 - we would rather keep our scheduled League fixture against West Bromwich that weekend and put the cup-tie with Leeds back to its original date."

A West Yorkshire police spokesman confirmed they had requested a morning kick-off for "public safety" reasons. An 11.30am start, he added, was "common practice in Leeds for high-profile

The Football League has no objections. "The safety of the public is paramount," said a spokesman. "It definitely takes precedence over sponsors getting exposure." Leeds, meanwhile, face playing three cupties next week after last night's FA Cup visit to Bolton was postponed. That game is now scheduled for next Wednesday, three days before the winners entertain Everton or Port Vale in the fifth round and three days after Leeds visit Birmingham in the Asprilla deal is back on

THE sage of Faustino Asprilla's proposed transfer from Parma to Newcastle edged wearily towards conclusion yester-

Forty-eight hours after the deal was officially pro-nounced dead by both the Premiership leaders and the Italian club, it was miraculously resurrected.

and constant reminder to Although brinkmanship prevented either club discussing the finer points of the revised financial package, it appears that Parma have now accepted a subyoung players not to fall into Stanislaus's career now appears to lie in ruins. He faces a formidable task if he wants to relaunch it as a player next February.

"His future is not good," said Hearn. "He's got to rebuild his life. Roger has imposed on himself a form of ton Orient — look at football'. be easy. Something like this leaves • West West Ham's midfielder Darren Currie, nephew of the England international Tony Currie, has joined Shrewswhite now. If you have a problem, it can grow into a monster. If you face up to it you can cut out the cancer and start again."

Tracey Neville has joined the brother Gary, of Manchester United, in England's international fold after being Hearn and the fellow direc- selected for Sunday's Undertors believed they had no alternative to sacking Stanis against Scotland in Glasgow.

Keep in touch more,

for less.

Save £15* on a

Swatch The Beep pager.

Swatch The Beep is a Swatch watch with a built-in numeric pager. Available at: BT Shops,

The Carphone Warehouse, BT Mobile outlets,

The Link, Swatch Store (Oxford Street, London),

House of Fraser and selected branches of

Or to order direct Freefone 0800 313000

Dixons and Currys.

Now only £84.99* (rtp. £99.99)

swatch

day, writes Ian Ross.

stantially lower bid. Newcastle said last night that they were hopeful th deal would be completed "within two or three days." The precise reduction in bate, but Newcastle's insistence that Asprilla is not fully recovered from a long standing knee injury may well have saved them round £1.5 million. If the transfer is com-pleted, Newcastle's manager Kevin Keegan can con-gratulate himself for his etermination to lure the Colombian international striker to Tyneside.

"I will always admire Mr

Keegan for the manner in which he has stood by me," aid Asprilla yesterday. "I believe he wanted me at all costs and I thank him for concluding this deal. He has my total admiration. I have been pulled around the board is forcefully rejecting offers and interest in a team which was assembled weeks."

If Asprilla signs, and is then granted a work permit, he is likely to make his debut against West Ham at Upton Park on February 21.

Middlerhungh here to upton Park on February 21.

Middlesbrough hope to sign Branco, the Brazilian international defender, before tonight's FA Cup game against Wimbledon at the Riverside Stadium.

enthusiasm and exuberance have been largely responsible for the team's soaring fortunes. It is not surprising. From his regular spot on the subs bench, the old dog Nelson has his regular spot on the subs bench, the old dog Nelson has been most impressed by the new tricks. "We are over-The 31-year-old full-back rained with Boro's squad yesterday before having talks with Bryan Robson.

"Branco has brought the place and teams flnd it over his wife and she speaks fluent English," said Robson. "I have to dis-cuss the finer details of a contract with him and the length of it, whether it should be for the rest of the in the last 11 games which, if season or for another two it leads to promotion to the years." Boro are confident about a work permit.

a happy Valley within tantalising sight of the Premiership regained its ground and then | Premiership clubs, rather than throw in youngsters now, are going out and buy-ing overseas. Which is very

Martin Thorpe reports on the youngsters who have put

T IS difficult to know

Forward" sell an astonishing

12,000-plus copies in hardback and earn a nice little pension entertain Brentford in an FA

Cup tie tonight, are prosper-ing by holding onto their young talent. Despite their reputation for selling players, for £275,000 but is now worth over £10 million thanks to the galaxy of rising stars whose enthusiasm and exuberance which has surprised people more: Charlton sit-ting second in the First its self-respect.

The side is also, in this Division or Garry Nelson topment to the benefits of ping the best-sellers' list.
The latest chapter in the much-travelled striker's employing a strong youth system, for six of last Sunday's team came up that way: the £3 million-rated 19-yearcareer has seen his diary of a Charlton season 'Left Foot old England Under-31 midfielder Lee Bowyer, Jamie Stuart. 19, Shaun Newton. 20, Steve Brown, 23, Kim Grant. 23, and Carl Leaburn, 26. for the 35-year-old.

Meanwhile, the club, who disconcerting when you think that there is a lot of young talent in this country and they're not getting the plat-form to show it." Charlton's other home-baked

Home-grown produce gives

Charlton their healthy glow

However, youth does not mean inexperience at Charlton. Brown, Newton, Grant and the winger John Robin-son, for instance, had already played 268 league games be-tween them prior to this sea-hot property, the 21-year-old] They are hungry. They want to get into the big time and they think they can with Charlton.'

"The younger ones have en together since they were been together since they were 11. beating every other team around," says the Charlton chairman Martin Simons.

"They don't fear anyone.
They are hungry. They want to get into the big time and they think they can with Charlton." The three rawest rookles — Bowyer, Rufus and Stuart — recently signed with the club until 1999 to prove it.
"Charlton have always had very hard to play against."

Despite Sunday's stuttering home draw with Crystal Palace, Alan Curbishley's youth "Charlton have always had to develop their own players because they haven't got the resources of a lot of bigger Premiership, will be a fitting reward for a club that finally defender Richard Rufus, was I son while the likes of Lea-Humphrey are relative

> And something else lies behind the Valley Revolution: a new coach and new thinking. When the co-manager of four years Steve Gritt left the club in the summer, he was replaced by Les Reed, a deep thinker on the game who ar-rived via an unusual route— he had been the FA's regional coach for the South of England. He immediately improved the team's fitness and set a team plan. "We try to play a clube," says Nelson. "But it is passing and moving game — better than there a credit to the boys how well they have done, and to the cross," he says professorially, been infected club for playing them. A lot of "Moves must end with qual-

ing third. If you're outscoring the opposition in that then of attacks, but if the ball is just rolling off for a throw when it gets there that's not quality possession."

Reed sits in the stand during games making notes on how his orders are being carried out, recording how many times the ball is won back, set plays, good and bad crosses and shots. He then collates it all, watching the match video before deciding what needs working on in training.

Reed has also worked on individual faults, citing Richard Rufus as an example: "We've been working on getting his feet in the right positions and knowing the right time to make a challenge, when the ball is winnable. In some situations he will need to back

So can Charlton finally win promotion? Four times in the last five seasons they have been similarly placed as now but then faded badly. And will there be money to strengthen the small squad? Using various marketing ploys and discounts, the club boosted attendances by 27 year cent last tendances by 27 per cent last season to an average of over 10,000. That income, plus the hefty Premiership hand-out, will obviously help but Charl-ton will still be cautious.

"We're not going to spend like crazy if we go up," says Simons, "and though it will be a struggle to do well, I know we will be above the bottom bunch because we are better than them."

Even the directors have been injected by the confi-

Top clubs in Euro summit

Martin Thorpe in Geneva on a Uefa meeting to discuss the game's future

N EXPANSION of the European Cup to in-clude, for the first time. teams that have not won their national leagues is among proposals being discussed at a high-powered meeting between Uefa and top European clubs here today.

The proposals, among a number on various subjects being put before the summit, would enable those among Europe's largest clubs who fail to win their national league to cash in hy competleague to cash in by compet-ing in Uefa's most lucrative instance, arguably the world's biggest club, AC Milan, has been competing in the lesser Uefa Cup while much smaller clubs, such as Anorthosis of Famagusia, the Cypriot champions, have competed in the European

Cup.
The idea of doing away with merit and allowing a club automatic entry to the competition because of its power and size is likely to be ruled out, but a system is being sought to give larger clubs more than one chance to compete in the European Cup and access to the mil-lions of pounds of income guaranteed in the cup's

Champions' League phase.

"The bigger clubs are seeking a platform to play more games against comparable attractive to television and sponsors and therefore much more lucrative," says Alex Fynn, a soccer consultant who has drawn up plans for at least two of the 36 clubs meet-ing today.

One format Fynn has sug-gested to his clubs is that the European Cup should be ex-tended to include 30 chamthe clubs who finish runners up in the leagues of the top 10 rated countries in Europe — currently Italy, France, Germany, Spain, England, Portugal, Russia, Belgium, Holland and Turkey.

The 40 teams would be di-vided into four divisions of 10, with the division winners going through to semi-finals. This expansion would also sese television's frustrations England and France, say, such as Blackburn and Nantes rather than, say, Liv-Arsenal's vice-chairman David Dein will call for a European League at the meeting. "We are in touch regularly with European clubs and they seem to have a desire for a European League to be formed. Now it's a ques-tion of the format," he said. ways to run parallel to our domestic league".

Today's meeting of clubs three from each of Europe's top 12 countries, with Man-chester United, Liverpool and Arsenal representing Eng-land — will also discuss plans to expand the Uefa Cup, the FA's idea for a midwinter break in England, and Uefa's continued reluctance to end the three-plus-two foreigner tition in line with the Bosman udgment. There is no guarantee any firm decisions will be reached today. Some contributors have called the meeting merely a "talking shop", although there is a chance that Uefa may decide to force a proposal on to the clubs in a show of strength.

Among other likely outcomes is that the many proposals on the table will be whittled down to, say, three that will be taken away and symmetrical in detail. examined in detail. Or there could be just a stalemate. With so many disparate ideas being floated, there is a

Patrick Glenn reports on the appointment of two financiers to the Glasgow club's board

Celtic invest for global appeal

stars with more titles than Thomas Hearns and Roberto

Sir Patrick Sheehy, the recently retired chairman of BAT Industries, and Brian Quinn, a senior executive of the Bank of England who retires this month, have beof the football club's holding company, Quinn will be vicechairman under Fergus

McCann.

Sheehy, who was knighted in 1991, retired from BAT —
Quinn, 58, is Gla and has degrees f

ELTIC vesterday formalised their entry into the global market by appointing to the board of Celtic plc two financial supersonal supe former member of the Euro-pean Round Table of Industrialists and the Action Committee for Europe. He was admitted to France's Legion d'Honneur last year and in 1993 was awarded Brazil's Order of the Southern Cross. In 1992 he was chairman of the Home Office inquiries into police responsibilities and rewards, which submitted the Sheehy Report to the Home Secretary Quinn, 58, is Glasgow-born of Bankers in Scotland and has previously held positions tary Fund. He has been with the Bank of England for 26

McCann, the Scots-Canadian millionaire who has transformed Celtic since his "Having men of their credentials and expertise in international business will be of great value as we expand and seek to maximise Celtic's po-tential around the world."

 Miliwall have confirmed Rovers' manager Jimmy Nicholl as a possible successor to Mick McCarthy, with the successful Nicholl adamant that come May he is not interested in renewing his contract under the new board at Stark's Park.

Peter Mead, the Millwall chairman, sald yesterday: Tve never met him but he does have outstanding cre-

Teamtalk The Independent News Reports Service

Call 0891 33 77+ 11 Leeds United

21 Liverpool

35 Man, City

24 Man. United 31 Middlesbrough 28 Norwich City 06 Notim. Forest

34 Leicester City

04 Stoke City 02 Sunderland 23 West Ham 29 Wimbledon 16 Wolves 18 Celtic topby League

leeds show oMercer.

Martin Thompe.

Hosts seek action to avoid cup chaos

David Hopps on increasing fears for the tournament unless the ICC acts decisively national Cricket Council to take decisive action to prevent the tourna-ment collapsing into chaos and avoid a damaging rift in the international game.

Pilcom, the joint hosts' organising committee, despairs of finding a politically acceptable solution to the refusal of Australia and West Indies to fulfil their fixtures in Sri Lanka in the wake of the Co-lombo bomb blast.

Pilcom representatives will meet the ICC's chairman Sir Clyde Walcott and chief executive David Richards in Calcutta on Friday. The issue will then be hotly debated during a full ICC meeting the following day, only 24 hours before the opening ceremony.

Walcott has called for the ICC to be given wider powers to enable it to counter its reputation as one of the most impotent governing bodies in world sport. Its recent record as been far from impressive. The ICC refused to hold an independent inquiry into Australian accusations of bribery against the former Pakistan captain Salim Ma-lik, insisting that what Aus-the game's gravest crisis for 20 years was, in fact, a domes-When the Sri Lanka off-

Rugby League

Leeds show

EEDS have surprisingly decided to place their New Zealand forward Gary Mercer

on the transfer list. The 29-year-old, who has not played since December 10 following a foot operation, has been made available for £45,000, which is who are coming through and we believe they are an impor-tant part of our future. We are also keen to reduce our con-

Darryl van de Veide has per-suaded the Australian Greg Mackey to come out of retirement just two months after he left Warrington to resume his job with the Australian Tale-communications company.

The 34-year-old half-back will join first division Huddersfield on a one-year play-ing contract, although he is expected to work closely with the Salford forward Craig Randall has been playing with a broken ankle since September. He has now corrective

X-rays have revealed that

The Huddersfield coach

no Mercer

John Huxley

tralian officials regarded as

ORLD CUP organ- | spinner Muttiah Muralithisers are to appeal aran was called for throwing to the Inter- two months ago, the ICC also failed to act upon Sri Lanka's appeal that it set up an offi-cial arbitration panel to judge video and medical evidence. That issue will again be reopened by the Sri Lankans in Calcutta.

With that record, if the Pakistan Indo-Lanka commit-tes does throw the ICC an inside pass, there is always the possibility that the ICC will throw it back again. If the cricket is cancelled, at least everyone should be able to manage an impromptu game of touch and pass.

Pilcom feels obliged to keep faith with Sri Lanka as land

heavy security. The offer refused by the Australians was extraordinary: a private flight from a rescheduled hotel in either India or the Maldive Islands, transport to and from the Premadasa Stadium heliconter avends. dium by belicopter, armed se-curity for all players at all times, the banning of vehicles from nearby roads, and body searches for everyhody in the vicinity of the stadium.

Even then, safety can never be guaranteed. But when the Australian leg-spinner Shane Warne glibly responded that it would still be risky to go shopping, it was little surprise that Sri Lanka's foreign

NASEEM HAMED's injured right hand is back to its frightening best and will help somersault the WBO featherweight champion into the ring for the first defence of his title in

Glasgow on March 16, the

the WBO, who has lost once

The fight is another visit to the Celtic fringes for Na-seem, who won the title against Steve Robinson in the rain at Cardiff on September 30 last year.

"My hand will be fine for March 16, it will be perfect," said Naseem. "Some-body will be knocked out, and it's not going to be me." There had been talk of an operation after the postponement of two planned

defences against the Mexi-can Arnulfo Caspillo on De-cember 9 and February 10, but Naseem vetoed going under the knife. "I decided against a big operation be-cause it would hurt too much," he said laughing,

"so I went for a cortisone in 19 fights.

minister Lakshman Kadira gamar snapped back that "shopping is for cissies". Kadiragamar would have gained a clue to Warne's jit-tery state of mind had he watched news footage on Australia's Channel 7 yesterday of a Melbourne party. When a balloon was popped behind him, Warne noticeably jumped with shock while those around him seemed oblivious to the incident.

Suggestions by one anonymous Indian official that organisers might sue Australia and West Indies for breaking and West Indies for breeking their contract have little credence, especially as a clause covering "natural calamities"

rilcom feels obliged to keep faith with Sri Lanka as long as the government insists it can safely stage games under heavy security. The offer refused by the security of the s matches, but that no points should be given to either side. The Sri Lankan board alone will suffer financially from the withdrawals. It is very much the poor relation among the World Cup hosts, benefiting solely from the gate receipts from the four matches it was due to stage. It is now left with only two modest contests assisted Timba.

est contests, against Zimba-bwe and Kenya. But it is the damage to Sri Lanka's tourist industry that most concerns its government, with an estimated 50 per cent of the country's World Cup bookings so far

Rugby Union

RANCE'S selectors have reacted ruthlessly to de-feat by Scotland last weekend.

The lock Olivier Merle, who week. The fly-half Thierry Lacroix switches with the centre

Thomas Castaignède, Abdel

Benazzi moves from the back row to lock and Christian Cal-

Campan, who will play along-side Lacroix in the centre.

PRARCE J. Esdoarry (Colomiera); E Stammel: (Toulouse), T. Laureb; (Darl, O Campan (Agan), P. Saint-André (Montierand, Capit); T. Castalgaide (Toulouse), G. Accomments (Begles-Bordeaux); G. Califamo (Toulouse), J. M. Gonzalex (Bayonne), F. Tournaire (Darl), L. Cabannes (Agan), O. Mosand (Darl), L. Cabannes (Racing), R. Castal (Carl)

(Dax), L Cabarnes (Racing), R Castal (Toulouse), F Peleus (Dax), Replacementar P Burnart Salles (Bégles-Bordeaux), S Glas (Bourgoln), P Carbonneen (Toulouse), S Dispagne

Hamed has title | Merle axed

defence in hand by France

Winter quarters . . . Paul Nicholls and his Grand National hope Deep Bramble at the trainer's snow-bound Somerset yard yesterday РНОТО РАШ АЗНТОМ

Hustler to beat National hoodoo

Chris Hawkins says 20-1 looks value about Twiston-Davies's two-time loser coming good in this year's Aintree marathon

off) at the third last year and was again on board when Young Hustler finished third heads the weights with 11st 10lb, but with the race coming

Saturday.

has twice failed to get round in the Mar-tell Grand National Mande took over from Carl Liewellyn, who was unseated may not seem to make much sense, but the 20-1 currently on offer by Ladbrokes and Hill's about Young Hustler in this year's race, to be run on March 30, is unlikely to last long. Young Hustler was described by his trainer. Nigel Twiston-Davies, at yester-London as "most unlucky" in previous years and this exceptionally tough chaser, who has was having the 56th race of his career at Sandown last aturday, does not look at all badly treated with 10st 12lb. Coral's make him favourite at 16-1, as do the Tote, although they have Jenny Pit-man's pair Superior Finish and Smith's Band co-

was shown a yellow card at Murrayfield, has now been given his marching orders along with the prop Michel Périé, the centre Alain Per-Apart from the fact that Young Hustler finished third in the Cheltenham Gold Cup two years ago and has a touch approximately half of what his heavyweight title and and the scrum-half Phisaginest Mike Tyson in Las The Leeds coach Dean Bell said: "We have some promising young back-row forwards southpaw ranked No. 4 by the New York and No course when carrying 12 stone to victory at Aintree in

> Chris Maude rode him on that occasion and got some superb leaps out of him, no-tably at the formidable Chair, which he cleared with feet to head to tight-head prop.

Guy Accoceberry has returned at scrum-half and new caps go to the prop Franck Tournaire, the flanker Richard Castel and the Agen full-back Olivier Young Hustler gave Sir Peter Lely 31lb and beat him by six lengths that day. In the National he would meet that down or something early at Cheltenham then the National will be back on the agenda." Master Oats ran in the National last year, 23 days after winning at Cheltenbam, and, on ground too fast for until weakening at the second-last to finish seventh behind Royal Athlete. cided whether last year's win-ner, who has 7lb more this time, will be in the field again. Royal Athlete, deto Amtrak Express on scribed by his owner, Gerry As expected, Master Oats Johnson, as "an old boat full of holes" is now 13 years old but, having been plagued only 16 days after the Chelten-ham Gold Cup, his priority with injuries, the gedling does not have much mileage on the clock.

"I had him ready to run a engagement, he is unlikely to week or so ago, but he stood on a shoe and hurt his foot," His trainer, Kim Bailey, said: "If all goes well in the Gold Cup he won't go to Liv-erpool, but if he's brought said Jenny Pitman. "He's got to have a run before the National and that will tell us how is is." Mrs P. also has Lusty Light, Superior Finish and Smith's being particularly stingy in comes an option, but the making Smith's Band joint National is the big objective. favourite at 16-1 with Deep Martin Pipe is mob-handed Bramble, pointing out he is as usual with seven entries, an inexperienced chaser. He including Carvill's Hill, but jumps like an old hand, however, and the bookmakers, having great respect for the Pitman record in the race, are taking no chances.

Band in the race, the latter pair being out of the handicap and certain to carry the minimum 10 stone.

Word has been filtering up from the West Country for some time that Deep Bramble, trained by Paul Nicholls, has been laid out for the National again with the same weight as and, with 10st 10lb, he is by no when he won in 1994. The Deep Bramble's best effort last year was when he gave Superior Finish 17lb and a five lengths beating in the Agfa Chase at Sandown. In the National he would meet Superior Finish on 71b better

He has not run so far this at home and was strongly fancied for the abandoned Coral National Trial at Chepstow last weekend. If the bad weather prevents Nicholls from running him soon, the his former star, who was making good progress after being off the course for nearly four years. Apparently Car again and has finally been retired.

Pipe's Miinnehoma is there trainer is optimistic that the horse is as good as ever, but he is now 13 and has not shown much in the last two

Party Politics, the peren nial standing dish in the National, finished second to Royal Athlete last year and has a 7lb pull. The 1992 winseason, but is said to be flying | ner can never be left out of calculations and Nick Gas says he is more forward that at this time last year.

Life Of A Lord, trained by the prolific Aiden O'Brien, will be trying to end a 20 year barren spell for the Irish in the National. Unbeaten this season, he is due to take on Master Oats at levels in Sundar's Hermessy Gold Cup at day's Hennessy Gold Cup at Leopardstown — a run which Norman Williamson could ride Master Oats in Ireland, but Bailey wants him to have a ride or two beforehand to prove his fitness after four months off with a broken thigh Williamson hopes to ride at Clonmel tomorrow. Freedom Cry, runner-up in both the Arc and Breeders' Cup Turf, has sustained an injury and will not contest the Dubai World Cup next month.

Grand National weights (Aintree, March 30)

Jodami 11- Flashing Steel 11- Dublis Fiyer 10- Moresleur Le Cure 10- Val d'Alenn 9- Royal Alistete 13-11 Young Hustler Lile Ol A Lord 10-11 Garvill's Hill 14-11 Deep Bramble Milinnehoms 13- Son of War 9-	1-10 1-14 1-14 1-14 1-15 1-15 1-2 1-2 1-2 1-2 1-2 1-2 1-2 1-3 1-3 1-3 1-3 1-4 1-4 1-4 1-4 1-5 1-4 1-5 1-6 1-7 1-6 1-7 1-7 1-7 1-7 1-7 1-7 1-7 1-7 1-7 1-7	10-10-0 8-9-13 10-9-12 11-0-11 10-9-10 12-0-8 9-9-8 10-9-7 3-0-8	Lo Siregone Captain Dibble Rast Never Stet Bishops Heil Sheer Abitity Fragrant Dawn Wyide Hide Antonin Riverside Boy Destra Dove Tipping Yim Bavard Diou Freshered Gate Encore Lin Pau The Crazy Blaht Friends of Geral	12-9-3 10-9-1 12-9-1 9-8-13 8-8-12 13-8-12 9-8-12 11-8-11 8-8-10 9-8-10 pg-8-8-9	Sir Peter Lely Gnome's Tyccon Well Briefeld Brackenfield Toogood To Be Beribbler Postage Stamp Silver Stick Grange Brabs Over The Deal Gotf Cap Merry Master Nearco Bay Into The Red Greenhill Ratifel	9-8-5 10-8-4 10-8-3 9-8-3 9-8-2 10-8-2 11-8-2 12-8-0 12-8-0	Bishops Island Vicorapt de Val Mirecle Man Emerald Storm Plastic Spacea; Christmes Gors Over The Strea Three Brownies Nevada Gold Repeat The Dor Far Senior Norman Conque	mont 11-7 8-7 8-7 8-7 8-7 15-7 10-7 10-7 56 11-7 10-7
---	---	--	---	--	--	---	---	---

Results

Van de Velde.

undergone surgery.

Soccer FA CUP

Fourth round ENDSLEIGH LEAGUE Second Division

Third Division TEMPLENTS SCOTTISH CUP

Third round

SCOTTISH LEAGUE econd Division ALCONO CHALLENGE CUP: Querte

Rugby Union NEINEKEN NATIONAL LEAGUE Fire Divisions Petpost Neuth v Aberavon. CLUB: Petpost Tredeger v Newbridge.

Rugby League SILK CUT CHALLENGE CUP: Re. four: Patpind: Whitehaven v Halifas.

Tennis ATP CHALLINGER (Wolfsburg, Gor) Salacean February Santas (Sunder-lugh (US) 6-4, 6-2.
LTA WOMEN'S SATTELLITE (Sunder-land): (First roamet J Ward (GB) bt K fund (GB) 8-0, 6-4; A Teador (Rom) bt H Matthews (GB) 6-2, 1-6, 6-3; R Senda (Rom) bt K Roubanova (GB) 8-7, 6-2, 6-4; S Sentith (GB) bt N Randriantely (Media-gascar) 8-0 6-2; M Beachman (Aus) bt L Woodroffe (GB) 5-4, 6-2; J Pellin (GB) bt S Lydon (GB) 6-4, 6-1; S A Selectal (GB) bt S Lydon (GB) 6-4, 6-1; S A Selectal (GB) bt D Hank (Neth) 5-1, 3-8, 6-4; A Linkows (Rus) bt A Galicvitz (Rom) 6-1, 6-0; C Taylor (GB) bt E Bond (GB) 6-4, 6-2.

Basketball NEAR Toronto 87, Portland 90; Milami 103. Sacramento, 92, NY 97, Descrit 91; Minne-sota 104. Delias 92; Vancouver 83. Utah 82; LA Cuppers 124, Golden State 128.

ice Hockey

injection instead."

Snooker BERSON AND HEDGES MASTERS (Wembley): Second round: J White (Eng.) bt D Harotd (Eng.) 6-6; A Hicks (Eng.) bt J Walland (Thal) 5-4.

Swimming WORLD CUP MEET (Imperia, ft): No Som butterflys 1, M Foster (GB) 23,63e 2, D Pimenkov (Rus) 24,66; 3, 7 Ruppri (Ger) 24,73.

Fixtures (7.30 unless stated; "=pitch inspection

Soccer

SOCCOF

FA CUP: Fearth rounds Chariton v Brentbord (7-46); Dovenby v Man C (7-46); Moldisobrough v Wembledon (7-45); Notim Forent v Oxford Uss (7-45); South Forent v Oxford Uss (7-45); South Forent v Oxford Uss (7-45); Fearth-spoon (nowSun, Feb 18, 11.9); Swindon v Oidham
(Mon, Feb 18, 11.9); Swindon v Oidham
(Mon, Feb 12, 7-45); Fearth-weamed
(wad, Feb 12, 7-45); Fearth-weamed (y46); Pastgoods Port Valle v Endrion (nowWed, Feb 14, 7-46); TEMBERTS SCOTTISH CUP: Thirdround replaye East File v Caledonian 7, smiles ScOTTISH LEAGUE Pression Divisions Aberdoon v Raith.
SCOTTISH LEAGUE Pression Petpends Airdrie v Hamilton. ThirdBrothedon Abrothe v Hamilton. ThirdDivisions Patpends Albion v East String; Condentheath v Livingston.

betern Propose Antonov East admin, but denbesth v Livingsiss.

2015 LEAGUES Freet Abingdon Tr v Tool-ing & Milipham Und. Thinds Harlow Tr v Clapton: Wealdstone v Camberley To. BEAZER MOSES LEAGUES Southervet Forest Green Purs v Newport (InW). De Blartans Capt Third mount. Trowbridge Tr v Satisbury C.

Historians Capt There issues reverses the validation of the control of the contro

Rugby Union

Rugby League Basketball

Sport in brief

Athletics

Mexico's Dioniclo Ceron who will be attempting his third successive victory -and Poland's Malgorzata So banska will defend their titles in the London Marathon on April 21 among a record entry of 39,000 runners, writes

Stephen Bierley. Diane Modahl's arbitration hearing with the Interna-tional Amateur Athletic Federation has been delayed and will not take place until April. Swimming

England's Alex Bennett, 19 who won a gold medal in the relay at the 1994 Common-wealth Games, has had her Olympic hopes wrecked after breaking both her legs and ankles in a car crash.

Rod Davis, who skippered oneAustralia in the America's Cup, scored five wins out of five on the first day of the Euros Australia Cup in Perth. the opening event in the 1996 Grand Prix Match Race Series, Britain's Stuart Chil-derley lost three races and won two, writes Bob Fisher.

Table Tennis

The International Table Tennis Federation has written to the English association expressing concern after the British coach, Chen Xinhua, removed an Austrian umpire's spectacles, hung them over a barrier and allegedly insulted him, writes Richard Jago. Chen had been given the red card during an Olympic ster three weeks ago.

Southwell A.W. Flat (transferred from Wolverhampton)

brooksts after horse's sums of pet & Pincapet: All als recov. 2.15 AYOR HANDICAP 370 77 E3,485

atel Loop 3 S 12 G Kentwell 5-2 (A Bulley) 8 res etilig: 11-4 légitese blistake, 7-2 risusatly, 9-2 Ringdom Princiss minte Gari

KALSKO G Ferra 5-9-2

2008-3- BECK THE RESCRIT (40) F Printes 5-9-2

0000-3- BECK THE RESCRIT (40) F Printes 5-9-2

0000-1 BAYA YA KEFRAH (255) N Belburge 4-5-13

0000-4 BESTER (20) K McAellik 4-6-13

0000-0 SERIESTON (20) F Printes 4-6-13

4-04 TAMIYAR (5) R Hollmann 4-8-13

000-1 BOOMLASH AR (13-9-) Sporring 5-8-11

2003-1 BOURDHT ARR (13-9-) Sporring 5-8-11

1665: Martenain Walk 4 8 7 J Onless 5-1 (A 166e) 10 mm Buttings 7–2 Roubostalus, 7–2 Nich The Biscool, 11–2 Taniyar, Moor Butropsiya, 16–1 Kalieto. 33–1 Heyn Ya Keltuh troid, 1905) MESTER: Led to 21 oct, westerand 21 out, 271 Alb of 9 to Todd (Longfeld Todd, Std). TAMEYAR: In tracis to hydrony, no pains front 21, 191 Alb of 9 to Desgo (Longfeld Todd, Std), ROUSFORTAURE: Walted with, effort 22 out, outpeaced front tortong, 41 Alb of 6 to Recognier

3.15 THAMES HANDICAP IN 41 CO,430 3715-Q- TOY PRINCESS (188) (D) C Braish 4-8-1 1941-51 MEAUMONT (7) (35 ad (C) (D) J Burks 8-8-8 005-005 CROSS TALK (S) R Indisabad 4-8-8 0000-05 BACKYREW (C) (1) (D) B Limmingh 4-8-8 MAYO- BRANDOME (107) P Mittell 4-8-7

1883: Haufari 4 9 7 7 Jose 4-1 (R Hoffmahous) 9 ras

PORM GRADE - MAKE A NOTEs in couch used no estre 21 cel. 25 six of 12 in Field of Vision, with HILLEAN (rice 28c) rever dangerous other store start, surprised 25 further yeary 10% (Wolvertempton Intill), Sid). TOY PROMISESSE Walted with, effort 4 cel., no impression close home, $1 2 cel of 4 to invest Wisely (Termont

3.45 WHERE 1 IN 1995 HARRISON TO EXPER red card during an Olympic qualifying match between England's Matthew Syed and Hungary's Zoltan Batorfi in

408 245-402 KOMBETEV DANCER (7) (D) A Bishiny 4-8-10 407 10228- STINGING REPLY (1485) (D) Lord Huntingdon 4 405 165-00-0 AUSKAL ROY (B) City Kellwany 4-8-1 409 100-0004 MARKABAR (B) (D) M Polylass 4-7-12 410 607-332 SARASII (11) M Carnache 6-7-10 1985: Logal Fiction 4 8 9 D McKeens 9-4 (12 Johnston) 7 rm Setting: 6-4 Outen Ot Aff Birds: 9-2 Kommyer Danser, 6-1 Eriton, 8-1 I Reply, Little Bur, Everner, 14-1 Gersch, 20-1 Manaber, 25-1 Angel Boy FORM GETTLE - MEUT_Disk in touch with no extra broad 30 and, over 30 less of 72 to rhampton initiEl Stal. St. Lad in 21 out, nt 2nd in Sharp Gazolio se seder (Saustweil Initi), Stal. 4.15 WILLIAM SELLING STAKES SYD SECURISE

80-412 BOFFT (77,00 B Sough 9-5.
6034-4 BOFFT (77,00 B Sough 9-5.
6034-4 BOFF A LADY (17) (00) N Lemoden 9-0.
6034-4 BOFF A LADY (17) (00) N Lemoden 9-0.
603-9-10 SHOOT THE MINISTREL (7) J Potenting 8-12.
60-60 SHOOT THE MINISTREL (7) J Potenting 8-12.
61-60 SHOOT THE MINISTREL (7) J Potenting 8-12.
61-60 SHOOT STREET (21) (00) P Potenting 8-7.
61-60 SHOOT (7) J Potenting 8-7.
61-60 SHOOT (7) J Potenting 8-7. 980: No commenceding space. editing: 2-1 Boty, 11-4 Marino Street, 9-2 Born A Lady, 8-1 Impingion, 10-1 Sepreting blue loue, 35-1 General Equation. Street The Minatral

IMAGO WALL STRUCT OF MANY THE AND THE

4.45 LADBROKE SERIES RANDICAP'S! 12,878 POL-22 KOMBONE GENERA RAMINO (D. 1975) 12,2578

POL-22 KOMBONE RAMINO (D. 1975) 16 HORNOMORIO 5-10-0

20230-D KALAR (14) (CD) D CHIPMEN 7-9-11

202-33 FEATMORISTONE LANE (14) (D) More 1. Sidesh 5-0-5

D-OGE TARABHUS RAMIO (7) (7) 16 Hor 10 D Fickolis 6-0-5

D-OGE TARABHUS (8) M Professor 4-0-4

3002-21 KURA (12) J Eyro 5-0-2

65001-0 PIRST OPTION (14) (D) R Bacteria 6-0-7

60001-0 NOMEY MELIODY (7) (C) (D) P Erens 5-7-10 TOP PORM TIPS: Princia Saira 8, ICen 7, Feetherstens Luce 6 1995: Scored Auslo 5 8 12 Acu nsia Barn, 7-2 Kim, 5-1 King Rambo, Peatherstone Lane. 9-1 Kalar. 10-1 Talahi ny Misindy PORM CIRCUS - KING BANGOR Perusiments start, bio 21 by Chadwell Hall, with FEATHERSTONE LANE (ripc 30) TRI away 3rd and KALAR (gree 3b) around 101 back in 10th (Woherhampton 51 Std) PRISIDIA BANGOR PROMISER, 1987 START OF KING RAMED (gr 50) by 10, with BOHNY MELODY (row-4b) around 151 intrins a way 7th ol 8 Kindorrekumptor 51, Sat). KERAC Made took, clear 17 out, won by 28 from Month (Southers) 57, Sat).

Blinkered first time today: 3.45 Komreyev Dancer; 4.15

Results

1.50 (1m 47): 1, OME OFF THE RAIL, Candy Morris (11-2): 2, Nover 3o Rite (7-2 Int): 3, Rojal Expression (11-2): 9 ran. 15. (A Moore): Tota: (5-4): (1-2): (2:0): (2:0). Dual F: (11.50, CSF: (24.56): Tricest: (102.98). Tric: (25.50). NR. Father Dan.

2.20 (60; 1, COPPER BRIGHT, J Waaver (7-2); 2, The Frisky Fermer (11-2); 3, Revelandeous Stud (6-4 fay), 6 rán. X, 2X, P Hessiam), 10st; 82,00; 22,10, 52,20. Dual F: 224,90 CBF: 021,07. NR: Effin Queen. 2.60 (1m 2f): 1, SWEET SUPPOSEN, L. Deteri (15-6): 2, Masseum (7-4 lav): 3, M. Akrevido (25-1). 6 ran. 18. 4, (C Dwyer). Trate: 15.40; 15.00; 10.42.0 Dual F (53.6). CSF: CS.94. Tricr E73.10 MR: Hand of Scraw

8.20 (Tf): 1, CORNESH SROW, I, Dettori (1-4 fav); 2, Beranov (5-1); 3, Don't Get Caught (20-1) I ran. 2f, X, (b Loder). Tote II 50; 17.10, 12.00, 12.50. Duals F; 3.00, CSF; 13.88. Trio: £37.80. NF: Showtime Styce. C3.88. Trier C37.80. Net: SHOWARTHE DARCH 3.50 (60): 1, ROBO MAGRIC, S. San 14-1): 2, Miol Camanet (5-1): 2, Lockson lavi. 10 ran. 15, 2, (i. Montague Hall. C5.80; C1.30, C2.40, C1.70. Dual Ft. C55: C28.91. Tricast: C59.13. Tricr C1

4-20 (1m): 1, DON'T DROP BORNS, Miss J Folidon (8-1): 2, Remar Real (13-2); 8, Canary Falces (11-1) 13-4 fav Trage Hero 12 ran. 13. 25. (D Thom). Tote: 50.80; 22.00. 12.10. $2.00. Qual Forecast $28.60 $59: 158.00. Tricast $236.23. Trice $287.90.

Southwell step in to prevent a blank day

ALL-WEATHER racing is a going all out to beat the elements with today's scheduled Wolverhampton meeting being switched to Southwell owing to probiems with mow at Dunstall Park.

Southwell is also on standby to stage an extra meeting on Saturday, subject to the proposed six races receiving a sufficiently competitive entry when they close at noon tomorrow.
Today's turf meetings at called off yesterday morning, but the valuable Reynoldstown Chase card at Ascot has been transferred to Wednesday of next week. With the weekend's Newbury fixture under threat, talks are under way on a possible re-scheduling of Saturday's Tote Gold

The Tote, British Horseracing Board, Levy Board and Newbury racecourse are joining forces to prevent the £100,000 hurdle being lost for the 10th time m its 33-year history. An announcement is expected

Tomorrow's Huntingdon and Wincanton cards look odds-on to be called off after inspections this morning. Friday's meeting at Bangor is also subject to an in-spection this morning, with the course frozen under nine inches of snow.

However, long-term fore-casts have boosted hopes that racing will be possible at Catterick and Ayr on Saturday.

SportsGuardian

Bumden white-out causes a pile-up

HE wrong kind of snow

— the deep and even stuff that sticks

around — returned to hit sport across the country yesterday, causing widespread cancellations in football, rugby and racing and sparking the obligatory rows over quite un-suitable new dates and horrendous fixture pile-ups, writes Chris Curtain Only three of the 16 scheduled soccer matches went ahead — including the FA Cup tie in balmy Huddersfield — with three of today's ties already off.

Leeds's fourth-round tie at Bolton had its second white-out so they will now play next Wednesday, just replay in the fifth round.

play next wednesday, Just three days after Sunday's Coca-Coca semi-final first leg at Birmingham. Should Leeds beat Bolton, three days later they will face the winner of last night's postponed Port Vale v Everton

Cold comfort ... under-soil heating may save Wolves' FA Cup replay against Tottenham tonight after a one o'clock inspection PHOTOGRAPH: NEW SHAPE

Copper buys Richmond

Robert Armstrong and Patrick Donovan on why an RFU founder club is to receive £2.5 million from a City metals trader

nessmen, whose former company is being investi gated in connection with an alleged multi-billion-pound Chilean copper scam, is to plough £2.5 million into Richmond, among the country's oldest and most traditional of modities trader. During the booming Eighties, Levett leapfrogged from job to job, earning ever higher salaries within the specialised world of copper trading.

His big break came late in 1989 when he teamed up with Charlie Vincent — nicknamed "Copperfingers" — and started up a firm called Winchester Commodities. Le-

NE of Britain's | made his fortune as a com- | vett left the company last year but, according to the company's last annual report. he received annual fees of just under £15 million. And that was before his director's sal-ary, which runs into hun-dreds of thousands of pounds. The Securites and Futures Authority is investigating ter although the firm Winches has insisted that all its deals

Outside the arcane world of | City commodity trading little is known about Levett apart from his love of rugby. Even though a tax exile in Monaco, he is a regular fixture at Winchester rugby club.

His cash injection means that one of the faded aristocrats of British rugby — Richmond were established in 1361 and played a large part in the founding of the Rugby Football Union 10 years later — will soon be chasing top internationals to play at the ground they have shared with ordon Scottish for 100 years.

in Europe.
"We have made unofficial approaches to members of the England squad but no negotiations have developed. We are top of Division Three and we need to gain promotion to Division One in the shortest possible time, Recruiting in-ternationals should act as a catalyst in the next few an 80 per cent share of the equity once the club is registered as a limited company.

Levett's business associate, Symon Elliott, who will become the club's chief execu tive, said they would recruit abroad, including the south-ern hemisphere if necessary, to compete with the best clubs

months."
Yesterday's unlikely development completes a hat-trick of London clubs to hit the jackpot in recent months. Le-vett's stake matches Nigel Wray's investment in Sara-cens and tops the £1.5 million which the electronics firm NEC put into Harlequins. Two Second Division clubs, Northampton and Newcastle Gosforth, have also found backers in the game's first professional season.

Richmond's 1,300 members will be able to participate in a rights issue worth between £250,000 and £500,000, ex-

What is that strange noise

- half-squawk, half-ululation

– that can be

Whitehall and Westminster? Is it the frostbitten ducks in St James's

Park? Or is it the sound of ex-ministers

civil servants

ministers, and senior preparing

report?

G2

page

themselves for the Scott

Francis Wheen

heard in

In return, Levett will take | plained Elliott. He added that the club would pay "market" salaries to secure top-quality players. In some cases that is likely to mean paying £60,000 to £100,000 a year.

All of which is a far cry from last weekend when the rugby director Vinny Codrington responded to reports linking Richmond with Ben Clarke by saying: "It's not really us, is it?"

Yesterday he said: "We expect to announce a number of international players signing over the next few months."

Levett ... rugby lover

Stiff upper lip travels but is not for export

Frank Keating

GREED, the English get in a tizz at the slightest of snowy cold "snaps", but it had to be the Australians, didn't it, who threaten cricket's World Cup by beginning the belly-ache about playing a match in Sri Lanka.

Poor diddums. Australians live their faraway lives down there — so safe, so soft, so sybaritic — that when the big wide world intrudes they run a mile. That is not the English way. Anglos go in where Aussies fear to tread.

A dozen winters ago, David Gower's English team went to a party in Bombay hosted by their friend, the British dep-uty high commissioner Percy Norris. They left the do just before midnight. On his way to work next morning, Norris was assassinated.

The England players, stoic in their grief and oblivious to threats, began the Test match next day. Not surprisingly, they lost it. But they turned up. Australians would have long been back home hiding under their duvets in pad-Land of hope and glory ---and he who dares. In 1973,

Wales and Scotland cancelled their Five Nations rugby matches against Ireland for ear of terrorist threats. England travelled. The Lansdowne Road throng gave them a touching standing ovation — then the Irish team gave them a pasting. At the post-match banquet, the England captain, the doughty farmer John Pullin, made a one-sen-tence speech: "We may not be much good at rugby — but at

OUR years earlier, the England cricketers had toured Pakistan and although that country was, Wisden noted, "in chaos [with] political upheaval, stu-dents and others rioting, law and order breaking down, bloodshed and destruction" Colin Cowdrey's team played on through it all. When the third Test in Karachi was abandoned through rioting with England's first Innings at 502 for seven wick-ets, it was the Pakistan authorities who called the whol thing off and booked the ly a century ago, Lord Hawke's MCC team was tour-ing a South Africa in turmoil and preparing for war. In his report to Lord's on his return. Hawke mentioned only in a throwaway line that the possi bility of snipers had caused two minor up-country matches to be cancelled: "a third on account of the Jameson Raid, and another because of the fearful explosion in Johannesburg: the general situation also seriously affected some of the attendances at other matches". But Eng-land's MCC men saw the tour

VEN a world war did not stop English cricket. Refusing to close Lord's in the spring of 1940, MCC's emi-nence Sir Pelham Warner de clared: "If Herr Goebbeis could broadcast to the world that war had caused cricket at Lord's to cease it would be an invaluable propaganda tri-umph for the Hun."

out. Of course they did.

Mind you, there were the occasional difficulties. In August that summer, as Wisden reported, "British Empire XI v Buccaneers. Match Drawn; with Buccaneers go ing for victory, match called off owing to Battle of Britain". Nor did Wisden bat an eye right through to 1944: "July 8: West of England XI were origi-nally matched against AA Command, but owing to gunners being engaged with flying bombs, opposition was changed to 'a Lord's XI' ". And so it went on. Once, when I was watching with him a minor riot at the Test ground in Trinidad in 1981, only a few weeks before he died, that master of malapropisms Ken Barrington sniffed the cordite and proclaimed: "This is nothing. I was batting once for Eng-land in Pakistan, got a hun-dred, and for the whole of my innings this major riot went on with the whole of the boundary ringed by plainclothes protectives armed to the teeth with rifles loaded

Likewise, Warne and his Aussie wimps should just gel out there and play. Like the English will. Not that the Australian sybarites should think any promise of "blanket security" will make them hat or bowl any easier.

The first morning of that harrowing Test in Bombay on England's 1984-85 tour, the security was upped to massive proportions, and to test it a photographer friend went to the main gate and announced: "I'm from the IRA. Could you direct me to the England dressing-room?"

"Yes. sir, certainly sir. Along here and up those steps, sir."

GROLSCH (UK) LIMITED

IMPORTANT RECALL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Grolsch Premium Lager "Stubby" 25cl ten pack.

This announcement only applies to 25cl (stubby) bottles of Grolsch Premium Lager purchased before today - 7th February. Any other size bottles or cans of Grolsch are not affected by this recall.

There is a slight risk that upon opening, you may find that small fragments of glass are present. The affected bottles are green with a white and green label and are all 25cl, intended to be supplied in packs of 10.

As a precautionary measure, please take any un-opened bottles bought before 7th February, back to the shop from which they were bought for a full refund.

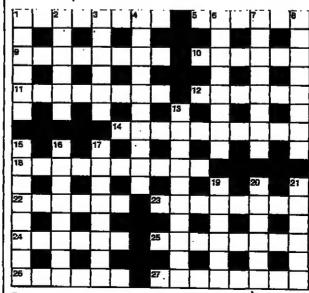

We apologise for any inconvenience caused. Grolsch in "stubbies" will be back on sale at your normal supplier in the near future, clearly marked as "OK" stock.

In case of difficulty, please contact our Consumer Help Line on Freephone 0800 371166. Lines open 8.00am - 6.00pm, Monday-Friday.

Guardian Crossword No 20,569

Set by Araucaria

1 Firm that has to employ ha

- 5 ... Job's following (as an afterthought) with charity (6) 9 I refuse to tell you when I
- 10 Eastern region, among others, is no good (6) 11 Choose a 22 firm with an organ expert (8)
- 12 It puts a new complexion on those who place moles in a 14 To get one up with a lark, put in compere some place (5.5)

18,1down,2,3 Foolish about Rule 1 on money shared when not skating in Whitehali (7,3,12,6) 22.23 Former 1 down 23's expansion of power has a State within in the States (6-8)

Boycott punishment by

26 "A Particular Place", starring Chaney and Ameche (6) 27 Where they cremated poor Anne and her mounta dog? (8)

Down

- 1,2,3 See 18 4 Inspiring total of costs of many a project (10)
- 6 Kid, once loveless, pursuing endless sabbath (8) 7 Ball used in billiards turned up on a stick (8)

- 8 Quench one's thirst, outside the pale, for ballet
- 13 Essay about an old writer in a quiet way (10) 15 Last in spite of everything
- 16 What might turn simple 17 Words set in orbit and let
- 19 Hat worn by Merle in the garden? (6) 20 Puncture support for the establishment (6)

Solution tomorrow

© Published by Guardian I Limited at 118 Farringdon R Press Cardre, 2 Millharbour, London E14 ING. Trafford Park Printers, Longbridge Neu-Isonburg/Zeppolathe3rasse 1, 6078
Neu-Isonburg/Zeppolathe9m, Germany;
Nord Ecleir, 15/21 rue du Calre. BP69 S0052 Roubest, Cedex 1, France, for end on beheil of the Guardian and Manchester
Evening News PLC. 46,469, Wodneuday
February 7, 1996 Registered &c a newspaper at the Post Office ISSM 0251-8077 Lendon-Tileshburg-

Tel 0181-832 7200. Fax 9161-